Legislators to try to override vetoes

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Two self-styled good government groups have lined up on opposing sides of the main issue that will face the state legislature when it convenes here Wednesday.

Common Cause in Missouri has urged lawmakers to uphold Gov. Christopher S. Bond's veto of a revision in the 1974 campaign Practices Act while Missourians for Honest Elections, the group that spearheaded the drive to gain overwhelming voter aproval of the law two years ago, is calling for an override of Bond's veto.

State lawmakers meet in the special election-year session beginning Wednesday afternoon for no more than 10 days to consider the governor's vetos of bills passed during the last legislative session. Leaders expect the session to last no more than a few days.

While there are several bills on the agenda, leaders of the Democratic-controlled legislature have said they expect the major push for an override to be on the campaign law revision. A two-thirds vote would be needed in both houses—23 in the Senate and 109 in the House.

Under the proposed bill, economic disclosure provisiions currently in the law would be repealed for all candidates and replaced by provisions currently in force for the governor and members of the General Assembly. The bill is also intended to exempt most candidates for minor offices from making any disclosure of their income sources as well as close some loopholes in the present law.

Common Cause claims the bill would "make a farce of the financial disclosure currently requried of candidates," and would exempt many major office candidates from the law. It backed up that claim with a study of the filings under the current provisions for this election year, claiming 30 per cent of the candidates for the legisature could have eluded the disclosure, which is intended to reveal potential conflicts of interest.

But Missourians for Honest Elections claims the economic disclosure provisions of the law are not its main asset and should be completely removed or diluted because of all the problems they have caused for minor office holders.

The groyp contended the main point of the law, adopted by a 4-1 margin in the 1974 general elecpion, is to disclose campaign contributions and expenditures. Real conflict of interest legislation, MHE officials say, should be in a seperate law.

Backers of that position agree, but claim they will have to use the burdensome provisions of the current law as a tradeoff for new conflict of interest legislation.

The revision measure was passed on the final might of the legislative session last spring only moments before the mandatory adjournment hour, and by the early hours of the following morning, Bond had indicated he would not accept it.

He carried out that threat on June 29, vetoing the bill he said would gut economic disclosure provisions of the law. Bond said at that time he hoped his veto would spur the legislature toward adoption next January of a bill that would take care of the problems with the disclosure sections while not gutting those provisions entirely.

Key aides to the governor say they can stop any attempt to override the veto, conceding, however, that the needed two-thirds vote will probably be attained in the Senate.

12 injured, 1 seriously in 7 accidents over holiday weekend

Only one of 12 persons receiving injuries was seriously injured in seven area traffic accidents over the Labor Day weekend, the highway patrol reported today.

One person received serious injuries and one person received minor injuries in a one- car accident at 5:15 p.m. Sunday on Route C, eight miles south of Fredericktown.

The accident occurred when a westbound car driven by Charles Manuel Reed, 22, of Fredericktown ran off the road at a high rate of speed, overturned and struck a tree.

Reed received minor injuries and a passenger, Carl Leo Francis, 19, of Fredericktown, was seriously injured. Both were taken to Madison County Memorial Hospital at Fredericktown.

Two persons received minor injuries in a two- vehicle accident at 3 p.m. Sunday on Route K, four miles west of Annapolis.

The accident occurred when Howard Leslie Buntion, 21, of Ironton lost control of a westbound car which struck the left side of an eastbound pickup truck driven by David Ray Meadows, 31, of Foley.

Two passengers in the Meadows truck, Simon R. Meadows, 4, and Jeffrey L. Meadows, 9, of Foley, received injuries and were taken to Arcadia Valley Hospital at Pilot Knob.

Two persons received minor injuries in a two- vehicle accident at 10:45 a.m. Sunday one mile west of Annapolis on Route K.

Anslem and a passenger on the motorcycle, Susan Jean Kopp, 23, of Cape Girardeau, received injuries and were taken to Arcadia Valley Hospital.

One person received minor injuries in a single- car accident at 1:30 p.m. Sunday seven miles east of Annapolis on Route J.

Two persons received minor injuries in a two- car accident at 1:10 p.m. Sunday on Highway 67 two miles south of Poplar Bluf.

The accident occurred when a southbound station wagon driven by Vernon Chester Ford, 62, of Plainview, Ark., struck the back of another southbound car, driven by Ricky Herbert Bettis, 22, of Granite City, Ill., which had stopped for traffic.

Ford and a passenger in his car, Patricia Savage, 34, of Plainview, were taken to Doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

One person was injured in a car- bicycle accident at 12:50 p.m. Monday on a county road one mile north of Fredericktown.

The accident occurred when a bicyclist, Bruce A. Michel, 14, of Fredericktown, darted across the road in the path of a northbound car driven by Daniel J. O'Brian, 19, of Fredericktown.

The patrol said O'Brian was unable to stop before striking the bicycle and rider.

Michel received minor injuries and was taken to Madison County Hospital.

Two persons received minor injuries in a one- car accident at 5 p.m. Monday 3.5 miles south of Dexter on Three Mile Road.

The accident occurred when Joyce Denise Venable, 16, of Malden lost control of a northbound car which struck a utility pole at a high rate of speed.

Two passengers, Angela Venable, 15, and Lori Hopwood, 16, of Malden, were taken to Dexter Memorial Hospital.

Sikeston woman hurt

Kathy Sue Dugger, 20, of 211 Crowe St., received minor injuries at 11:47 a.m. Sunday when the car she was driving was struck by a truck at the intersection of Warner and Benton streets.

She was treated for scratches to the forehead and released from the emergency room of Missouri Delta Community Hospital.

Public safety officers said the accident occured in the intersection when her car, eastbound on Benton, was struck in the side by a half-ton truck driven by Billy Wayne Hay, 36, of 307 Virginia St., who was southbound on Warner St.

Hay told officers he did not see the Dugger car until it was in the intersection.

There were no arrests.

Youth charged in break-in

CHAFFEE — An 18-year-old Chaffee youth has been charged with burglary and stealing in connection with a break-in Sunday at the Paul Brown home on Old Frisco Rd., east of Chaffee.

Deputy Sheriff Roger Bartolo said Leslie Allen Lankford, 18, of Chaffee, was taken into custody at 4 p.m. Monday in connection with the break-in, in which approximately $25 to $35 in quarters and a .410 gauge shotgun was taken.

Brown had reported the break-in at 8:20 p.m. Sunday.

Bartolo said investigation showed entry to the home was gained through a window.

Council to meet tonight

The City Council will meet at 7:30 p.m. today in the City Administrative Building.

The agenda includes three liquor license requests, a power sales agreement, the rezoning of a lot in Smith Addition from single family to commercial and public safety rules and regulations.

Tax bill vote near

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ordinary taxpayers are winning more benefits than they are losing as a Senate-House panel puts together a compromise tax-revision bill.

The final score may be known late this week, when members of the conference committee expect to finish the bill and send it to the House and Senate for one last vote.

Most issues concerning individual taxpayers were settled during the first seven days of the conference. Chief among these is a $15-billion-a-year tax-cut extension through Dec. 31, 1977.

Provisions generally affecting only taxpayers who earn more than $50,000 a year are the major points of contention remaining between the House and Senate conferees. There is some risk that if taxes on the rich are raised too sharply, the final bill could be in trouble in the Senate. But if too many tax shelters are left untouched, the measure could face rough going in the House.

Meanwhile, President Ford issued a statement Monday calling on Congress to approve a tax bill that meets the needs of all Americans.

"Unfortunately, Congress has become ensnarled in rewriting of detailed provisions of the tax code and has failed to recognize the broad interests of the country," Ford asserted.

PENDING

CHILD CARE — An expanded tax credit for child-care expenses is assured since such a provision was passed in both the House and Senate bills. The only question is how much bigger the credit will be.

The House and Senate bills agree that the current child-care deduction should be replaced with a tax credit, which will benefit even those families that do not itemize deductions.

The maximum credit — subtracted directly from taxes owed — would be $400 a year for the care of one child and $800 for two or more. The credit would apply even if one or both parents work only part-time.

SICK PAY — The House wants to eliminate the current law that allows tax-free treatment of up to $100 a week that is paid a sick worker by the employer, and replace it with a tax exemption of up to $5,200 a year for permanently and totally disabled retirees under age 65.

The Senate bill would keep sick pay for workers making $15,000 or less but phase it down between $15,000 and $20,000 and eliminate it above $20,000 income.

PENSIONS — Present law allows a worker who has no other pension plan to exempt from current taxes up to $1,500 a year to be set aside in an Individual Retirement Account (IRA). No tax is paid until the money is withdrawn at retirement.

The House voted to allow workers whose company pensions are inadequate to invest in an IRA on a limited basis. This would cost $502 million a year by 1981 and is not in the Senate bill.

Saddle, farm products stolen

BLOOMFIELD — Two thefts occurred over the Labor Day weekend, Stoddard County Sheriff Ralph Mouser said today.

The saddle was described as having silver inlay, with the inscription "Charles" on it.

The other theft took place either Friday or Saturday on a farm located west of Bloomfield, owned by Bill Harris of Bloomfield

Calf feed, seed beans, seed wheat, oil, cattle feed, a scoop shovel, extension cord and other items were taken.

Mouser said the thieves apparently had a truck. Tracks were found at the scene.

Burglars take cigarettes

Burglars took four packages of cigarettes from the Farmers Market Cafe, 889 W. Malone Ave., sometime Sunday, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Poplar Bluff man on list of killed in action

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo. (AP) — Macye Metz, whose husband's name was on a Vietnamese list of 12 men killed in action, says she would like to know more about his death.

"I'm satisfied that the information I received today is correct," said Mrs. Metz Monday after the Air Force notified her that the list included her husband, Maj. James H. Metz.

"I feel sure that what I was told was told to me in good faith. I would like to know more details. I would like to know if there are any remains to be recovered. This we don't know.

"All I know is that they weren't taken prisoner. From that standpoint, there is some relief in knowing that it was over quickly."

Metz was listed as a prisoner of war when he reportedly ejected from his plane in April 1968, but Mrs. Metz said all hope for his return disappeared when he was not among those prisoners returning from Vietnam in 1973.

"I was surprised — not that I had any hope left but that I found out anything," said Mrs. Metz, who indicated religious faith helped her during the early days of her husband's disappearance.

Metz was later declared killed in action and a memorial service was held in Poplar Bluff in May 1975.

"As far as I was concerned, the memorial service was the end, the final thing we could do for him," said Mrs. Metz, who lives in Poplar Bluff with her three children, including an 8-year-old daughter born three months after Metz disappeared.

CHANGE OF COMMAND

By Howard Flieger

Chances are you didn't see it on television or in the newspapers. Such changes in military command are small swatches of the total fabric of current events.

Nine years ago he lay ill and neglected in a filthy prison cell in North Vietnam — with two broken arms and a broken leg. A Navy flier, he had been shot down by enemy rockets and captured by the Communists.

The ordeal of imprisonment, brutality and abuse lasted nearly six years before he made it back to the United States. His first- person account of his experience — typical of many others — was published in this magazine in May, 1973, and attracted nationwide attention.

But there is more to the story than his release, recovery and the return to active duty that has now put him in command of one of the Navy's crack flying outfits.

John is the third generation in a family dedicated to what is known in the military as "career Navy."

His grandfather, the first John S. McCain, was on combat duty in two World Wars. In World War II, he was an admiral in the Pacific. He was on the deck of the battleship Missouri in 1945 when Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur accepted the formal Japanese surrender.

Commander McCain's father, the second John S. McCain, was a submarine commander in World War II and stood with his father on the Missouri to witness the surrender.

In the years that followed, John S. McCain II rose to the rank of four- star admiral. At the time of his retirement in 1972, he was commander in chief of all Pacific forces. He served in that post burdended with the knowledge that his own son was a prisoner in the hands of the North Vietnamese.

The man who nursed young John McCain back from the edge of death in Hanoi was a fellow prisoner, Maj. George E. Day. He, too, has made it all the way back — promotion to colonel and to vice commander of the 33rd Tactical Fighter Wing at Eglin Air Force Base in Florida.

Still another former prisoner, R. Adm. James B. Stockdale, is now commander of the Anti- submarine Warfare Wing of the Pacific Fleet. He and Colonel Day receive Medals of Honor at the White House March 4.

Of his experience as a prisoner, Admiral Stockdale once said:

"Most men need some kind of personal philosophy to endure what the Vietnam POW's endured. For many it is religion; for many it is patriotic cause; for some it is simply a question of doing their jobs ... In our effort to survive and return with honor, we drew on the totality of our American heritage."

Capt. Jeremiah A. Denton — now a rear admiral — put it another way when he and the other POW's came home from Vietnam at the end of the war.

To those who welcomed them, he said:

"We are honored to have the opportunity to serve our country under difficult circumstances. We are profoundly grateful to our Commander in Chief and to our nation for this day. God bless America!"

A LITTLE GOADING HELPS

You can't legislate technology, any more than you can legislate morality. But the automobile industry's innovative response to congressionally mandated improvements in fuel economy and emissions suggests that a little governmental goading may help speed up the process.

General Motors has announced that it will introduce a new electronic spark timing system this fall that will mark the first use of a microproessor — an on-board digital computer — in a production automobile.

Named MISAR, for Microprocessed Sensing and Automatic Regulation, the new system will be standard on the 1977 Oldsmobile Toronado and will continually adjust ignition timing for best fuel economy and emissions performance, GM president Elliott M. Estes told a meeting of the Society of Automotive Engineers.

Tests indicate that the microprocessor, which contains more than 20,000 transistors and other electronic components, will produce a fuel economy benefit of more than one mile per gallon at 1977 federal emissions levels. In addition, driveability and response of the car is better.

GM is also developing other electronic systems, including one which can keep an engine operating at its best fuel economy without knocking and another which can permit use of advanced catalytic converters for further control of exhaust emissions.

"Once this new electronic technology is aboard our cars, it can then take on many other tasks," says Estes. "For instance, it can provide digital readouts for the driver. It can be adapted to diagnostic applications. More sophisticated engine controls then become possible, as do such things as computer- controlled, antiskid braking and simplification of the electrical wiring system."

MAKING IT SIMPLE FOR JIMMY CARTER

This year, especially, with Democratic Presidential candidate Jimmy Carter calling for repeal of Right to Work laws, it becomes more important than ever for voters to fully understand what Right to Work is all about. This column, we hope, will answer that question.

...Right to Work means that an employee cannot be forced to join or pay money to a labor union-or any other private organization-in order to get or hold a job.

So, in those 20 states which have preserved the Right to Work an employee enjoys his freedom to work at his occupation whether he is or is not a labor union member.

...Right to Work protects the basic right of individuals to choose either membership or non-membership in a labor organization. It does not interfere in any way with legitimate union activity, nor does it restrict the right of employees to organize and bargain collectively with their employers.

Rather, the only question posed by the Right to Work principle is whether an American citizen may be compelled to join and make financial contributions to any organization-church, labor union, lodge or civic club—in order to get or hold a job.

That Right to Work should be a fundamental individual right seems unassailable. Several years ago the respected Scripps-Howard newspaper chain editorialized, "The principle of Right to Work is not at all anti-union. It is in line with all four basic concepts of freedom-freedom to speak, freedom to vote, freedom to worship, freedom to choose."

Said former North Carolina Senator Sam J. Ervin, who like Carter is a Democrat: "Is there anything that is antiunion in a person's entertaining the belief that it is not an injustice to labor unions to require them to obtain their members in exactly the same way that churches and all other voluntary organizations obtain their members?"

To the nearly one million active supporters of the National Right to Work Committee, the fundamental American right of free choice is incontestable. Every person, we feel, should have the right to join a union and participate in union activities. But, he or she should have the same right not to join.

American workers should not be coerced by either the factory boss or the union boss. That's what Right to Work is all about. It's really simple. So simple that even Jimmy Carter should be able to understand.

NEW SPIRIT REQUIRED

Incredibly enough, a major U.S. industry that provides some three fourths of our total energy supply is portrayed these days as one with "...objectives and methods little different from those of organized crime. Charges of monopoly, conspiracy, deliberate contrivance of shortages, profiteering, and various other infamies have become commonplace." The history of private oil and natural gas exploration and development refutes such preposterous claims. It should be clear to all that the true cause of the present energy shortage in the United States is lack of a cohevise national energy policy. This lack set the stage for over-dependence upon foreign oil imports. Official warnings of an impending domestic energy shortage were sounded as early as the 1950's, but went largely unheeded until recent years. The gap between supply and demand widened through public neglect and the imposition of federal regulations and environmental roadblocks that militated against adequate domestic oil and natural gas production. So it is that the gap has had to be filled with imports equal to some 36 percent of total consumption in 1973.

Many of the proposals to ease the situation have been counter productive, ranging from price rollbacks on domestic crude to extension of excess profits taxes at a time when massive capital expenditures are required. These suggestions ignore the realities of oil discovery and development and do not produce even one barrel of oil, lety alone move the U.S. closer to a reasonable degree of self-sufficiency in energy.

The huge amounts of money, equipment, time and personnel involved in oil production require large companies with above average earnings if adequate investment funds are to be made available and the nation's energy needs are to be met. The U.S. oil industry is a global trend setter in the business of developing, transporting and marketing oil efficiently and at the lowest reasonable prices. If this is to continue, there must be more of a spirit of cooperation between government and the private sector. The U.S. has the technology and natural resources to remain a leader of nations for decades to come. All that is needed is the will to employ these adnantages to the fullest.

AN IRRESPONSIBLE TAX CUT TO DESTROY PROGRAMS

The fate of the sales tax on food and drugs now rests with the voters of Missouri. The stakes are enormous. They directly concern the daily operation of the state and most municipal governments. Attempting to eliminate taxes by initiative petition is irresponsible. It is also potentially dangerous to the basic programs on which so many people depend.

If the tax is rolled back on food and drugs, it would cost the cities and the state at least $150 million annually. Some estimates run as high as $180 million. Missouri, as well as the cities, already is hard-pressed financially. If such an amount were cut from the present budgets, the impact would be catastrophic on education, mental health, welfare and all other services.

Obviously the lost income would have to be made up by higher taxes elsewhere. No elected official—and that goes for both the Legislature and the executive branch—could survive in office if he allowed vital programs to disintegrate.

A possible solution would be to double the sales tax on all items except food and drugs. This reveals the fallacy of the sponsors, who seem to assume that "needy" people buy nothing but food and drugs. Also it should be pointed out that those who are in genuine need are already receiving aid in welfare payments. In addition, about $15.5 million is spent annually by Missouri for medicine for welfare recipients. The food stamp program also provides much help.

Since there is no way to know which taxes would be raised to compensate for this staggering loss, if it materializes, it is impossible to predict who would pay more and who would pay less under a revised tax formula. But it seems safe to assume the final tax savings will be trivial regardless of how the formula is readjusted.

In the meantime the cities and the state will be put through a horrendous and unnecessary crunch. The contention that the needy will save up to 10 per cent of their income when the maximum, combined (city plus state) tax is 4 per cent is absurd.

If the sales tax on food and drugs is ever to be removed in Missouri, the action should follow a careful study of the economic impact of the decision—plus a precise plan to offset the lost revenue. None of this has occurred. Those who have circulated the petitions show no regard for the consequences.

This proposition can be defeated. But that will take a major and sustained educational effort in the time that remains before November. Most Missourians are sensible and practical people. After all of the facts are laid out before them, it seems unlikely a majority will approve a scheme that is nothing more than a gimmick—but a highly destructive one for this state.

XXX

TO HELP NOBODY

Good intentions but not common sense are behind the initiative petition now being circulated to slash $150 million to $180 million from state revenue.

The good intentions are glistening with the prospect of what the petition seeks to accomplish—help the needy by ending the Missouri sales tax on food and medicine.

The common sense being overlooked is just this:

When you slash such a huge sum from state revenues by ending one source of taxation, you are forcing the use of another source of taxation to replace it.

That is common sense.

Further, it is common sense to recognize that ending the sales tax on food and medicine doesn't really do what the people circulating the petitions want done. They want to help people at the welfare level.

The amount of help offered by ending the sales tax on food and medicine is truly minor. Keep in mind that the state is already helping welfare recipients in a major way to pay for medicine and food. As a matter of fact, between food stamps and welfare funds supplied the needy for medicine, our truly needy are not being overlooked.

Keep in mind, the needy—the truly needy—are the very few people in Missouri buying food and medicine. So, in the end, it is those people best able to pay who will benefit the most by ending the sales tax on food and medicine. They will benefit most until a new tax is passed.

For these reasons we hope you will look hard at the petitions if you are asked to sign one; and please think hard when you vote on the issue in November. We believe Missourians will do a far more constructive job for each other including our truly needy, by not signing the petition, by voting against the proposal.

Button Plan Sews Up Prevention Of A War

by Art Buchwald

(Art Buchwald was so disappointed he was't chosen as President Ford's running mate that he has decided to take a few weeks off. He left behind some of his all-time favorite columns.)

One of the things everyone has to worry about these days is the danger of an accidental war being set off with nuclear weapons. The best-selling book "Fail-Safe," by Eugene Burdick and Harvey Wheeler, deals with this problem when a group of American bombers have gone past their fail-safe point and, because of some foul-up in a little black box, the bombers haven't gotten the word to come back. They are scheduled to blow up Moscow. To show the Russians it's all an accident, the President of the United States blows up New York, even though his wife is there on a shopping trip.

But there is another school in Washington that insists there are so many safeguards on atomic weapons that even if someone wanted to fire one he wouldn't be able to do it.

Here is how this school sees it. In order to start a war, someone will have to push a button. To safeguard that no one will push the button accidentally, it is hidden every week in a different spot.

Only two people, both low-ranking military officers from different branches of the armed services, know the location of the button -- but they don't know each other. Each has the authority to push the button when ordered to do so from higher up. But if both their thumbs are not on the button at the same time, it will not work.

Now let us suppose, by some stretch of the imagination, both men accidentally meet at the same location at the same time and both decide to push the button at the same time. This does not automatically start World War III. When the button is pushed, all it does is turn on a green light in the bombproff, radiation-shielded, underground shelter in a secret palace near Cheyenne, Wyo The shelter is manned by an enlisted WAC and an enlisted WAVE, each of whom has a key to a white Princess tlelephone. As soon as they see the green light, they dial a secret number in South Dakota and say, "Condition Green."

This information is passed on to the quartermaster of the base, who immediately tries to contact Washington. But since he doesn't have the area code number for Washington, he can't dial directly. So he sends the message by carrier pigeon. This is known as "Condition Red."

As soon as the pigeon arrives in Washington, the secretary of defense is notified, and he in turn informs the President.

But the President cannot give the signal to do anything without turning a switch and there are seven locks on the switch. Each member of the President's family has a key to one of the locks and the switch cannot be pulled unless all the locks are opened at the same time. Since the family is never in Washington all at the same time, it is virtually impossible for the President to pull the siwtch.

Therefore, the chances of an accidental or even an intentional war are remote and shouldn't give anyone any sleepless nights. If it weren't for all these safeguards, I'd be worried too.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- Mafia mobster John Roselli may have taken the secret of the John F. Kennedy assassination with him to his death. He was brutally murdered a few weeks ago, his hacked-up body stuffed into an oil drum and dumped into Miami's Biscayne Bay.

Before he died, Roselli hinted to associates that he knew who had arranged President Kennedy's murder. It was the same conspirators, he suggested, whom he had recruited earlier to kill Cuban Premier Fidel Castro.

By Roselli's cryptic account, Castro learned the identity of the underworld contacts in Havana who had been trying to knock him off. He believed, not altogether without basis, that President Kennedy was behind the plot.

The Cuban leader, as the supreme irony, decided to turn the tables and use the same crowd to arrange Kennedy's assassination, according to Roselli's scenario. To save their skins, the plotters lined up Lee Harvey Oswald to pull the trigger.

Roselli could never be pinned down on names or details. It was also difficult to assess whether he knew what he was talking about or whether he merely described what he thought might have happened. Certainly there is no real evidence to support Roselli's story. But there are enough curious circumstances to justify telling it. Here are the fascinating highlights.

The ruggedly handsome Roselli, a flamboyant mobster with underworld contacts in Havana, was recruited by the Central Intelligence Agency in 1960 to assassinate Castro. He had no authority, however, over the underworld elements in Havana.

They were under the loose control of Florida's Mafia chieftan, Santos Trafficante. His gambling enterprises in Havana had been closed down by Castro after the 1959 revolution. In fact, Trafficante had been lodged for a period in a Cuban jail, an indignity that didn't endear Castro to him.

After Trafficante made it back to his Florida haunts, he left part of his organization behind in Havana. Some of his henchmen even managed to develop contacts in Castro's inner circle. These were the people Roselli wanted to use to knock off Castro.

But Roselli didn't have the stature inside the Mafia to make the necessary arrangements with Trafficante. So Roselli called in his patron, the Chicago godfather Sam "Momo" Giancana, to deal with Trafficante.

As Roselli's associates tell it, he persuaded Giancana that it would be to their advantage to win the good will of the CIA. Convinced, Giancana flew down to Florida to make the preliminary arrangements.

He was in the middle of these delicate dealings, incidentally, when he learned that his favorite girl friend, singer Phyllis McGuire, had developed a romantic attachment in Las Vegas to comedian Dan Rowan. Enraged, Giancana wanted to fly straight to Las Vegas and end the romance.

But Robert Maheu, who had recruited Roselli for the CIA, talked Giancana out of it by offering to bug Rowan's hotel room and promising the angry mobster a full report.

Once Giancana and Trafficante set it up, Roselli used the Havana underworld to plot Castro's demise. At first, they tried to plant poison pills, supplied by the CIA, in Castro's food. The pills would have made it appear that he died of natural causes. When this failed, snipers were dispatched to a Havana rooftop. They were caught.

The word reached Roselli that some of the plotters had been tortured and that Castro had learned about the whole operation.

The CIA called off the Roselli operation in March, 1963, but recruited a Castro associate named Rolando Cubela to murder Castro.

In an impromptu, three-hour interview with Associated Press reporter Daniel Harker, Castro indicated that he knew about the attempts on his life and warned that U.S. leaders also might not be safe. That was September 7, 1963.

According to Roselli, Castro enlisted the same underworld elements whom he had caught plotting against him. They supposedly were Cubans from the old Trafficante organization. Working with Cuban intelligence, they allegedly lined up an ex-Marine sharpshooter named Lee Harvey Oswald, who had been active in the pro-Castro movement.

According to Roselli's version, Oswald may have shot Kennedy or may have acted as a decoy while others ambushed him from closer range. When Oswald was picked up, Roselli suggested, the underworld conspirators feared he would crack and disclose information that might lead to them. This almost certainly would have brought a massive U.S. crackdown on the Mafia.

So Jack Ruby was ordered to eliminate Oswald, making it appear as an act of reprisal against the President's killer. At least this is how Roselli explained the tragedy in Dallas.

There is no proof, of course. But there is some corroborative, circumstattial evidence. It has been established, for example, that Oswald visited the Cuban consulate in Mexico City two months before the dreadful day in Dallas. An informant named Sylva Duran first stated, then denied, that she had overheard the Cubans speak to Oswald about assassinating someone and had seen them slip him some money.

Several key CIA officials believed that Castro was behind the Kennedy assassination. Two days after the shooting, the CIA cabled from Mexico City that Ambassador Thomas Mann felt the Soviets were too sophisticated to participate in a direct assassination of the President but that the Cubans would have been stupid enough to recruit Oswald.

It has also been established that Jack Ruby indeed had been in Cuba and had connections in the Havana underworld. One CIA cable, dated November 28, 1963, reported that "an American gangster-type named Ruby" had visited Santos Trafficante in his Cuban prison.

Roselli was questioned about the Kennedy assassination behind closed doors by the Senate Intelligence Committee. The transcript is stamped "Top Secret." We can report, however, that Roselli did not tell the senators the same story that he had confided to associates. He said it was his opinion that the plot against Castro had backfired and that Castro had arranged for Kennedy's death. But Roselli stressed that this was merely his own speculation.

Sens. Richard Schweiker, R.-Pa. and Howard Baker, R.-Tenn., indicated that they believed Roselli was holding back information. But the mobster insisted he could give them nothing but his opinion.

Footnote: As to the Giancana episode, Maheu refused comment. A spokesman for Rowan said he and Miss McGuire were "just old friends. There was no hot romance." Miss McGurie could not be reached. On Roselli's tale of the Cuban connection, David Belin, Assistant Counsel of the Warren Commission, said he believed Jack Ruby was "not conspiratorially involved." He said he knew of no direct evidence of domestic or foreign conspiracy in the assassination of President Kennedy.

CHANGE OF COMMAND

By Howard Flieger

Chances are you didn't see it on television or in the newspapers. Such changes in military command are small swatches of the total fabric of current events.

But this one deserves special notice.

Nine years ago he lay ill and neglected in a filthy prison cell in North Vietnam — with two broken arms and a broken leg. A Navy flier, he had been shot down by enemy rockets and captured by the Communists.

The ordeal of imprisonment, brutality and abuse lasted nearly six years before he made it back to the United States. His first- person account of his experience — typical of many others — was published in this magazine in May, 1973, and attracted nationwide attention.

But there is more to the story than his release, recovery and the return to active duty that has now put him in command of one of the Navy's crack flying outfits.

John is the third generation in a family dedicated to what is known in the military as "career Navy."

His grandfather, the first John S. McCain, was on combat duty in two World Wars. In World War II, he was an admiral in the Pacific. He was on the deck of the battleship Missouri in 1945 when Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur accepted the formal Japanese surrender.

Commander McCain's father, the second John S. McCain, was a submarine commander in World War II and stood with his father on the Missouri to witness the surrender.

In the years that followed, John S. McCain II rose to the rank of four- star admiral. At the time of his retirement in 1972, he was commander in chief of all Pacific forces. He served in that post burdended with the knowledge that his own son was a prisoner in the hands of the North Vietnamese.

Charges of monopoly, conspiracy, deliberate contrivance of shortages, profiteering, and various other infamies have become commonplace." The history of private oil and natural gas exploration and development refutes such preposterous claims. It should be clear to all that the true cause of the present energy shortage in the United States is lack of a cohevise national energy policy. This lack set the stage for over-dependence upon foreign oil imports. Official warnings of an impending domestic energy shortage were sounded as early as the 1950's, but went largely unheeded until recent years. The gap between supply and demand widened through public neglect and the imposition of federal regulations and environmental roadblocks that militated against adequate domestic oil and natural gas production. So it is that the gap has had to be filled with imports equal to some 36 percent of total consumption in 1973.

Many of the proposals to ease the situation have been counter productive, ranging from price rollbacks on domestic crude to extension of excess profits taxes at a time when massive capital expenditures are required. These suggestions ignore the realities of oil discovery and development and do not produce even one barrel of oil, lety alone move the U.S. closer to a reasonable degree of self-sufficiency in energy.

The huge amounts of money, equipment, time and personnel involved in oil production require large companies with above average earnings if adequate investment funds are to be made available and the nation's energy needs are to be met. The U.S. oil industry is a global trend setter in the business of developing, transporting and marketing oil efficiently and at the lowest reasonable prices. If this is to continue, there must be more of a spirit of cooperation between government and the private sector. The U.S. has the technology and natural resources to remain a leader of nations for decades to come. All that is needed is the will to employ these adnantages to the fullest.

AN IRRESPONSIBLE TAX CUT TO DESTROY PROGRAMS

The fate of the sales tax on food and drugs now rests with the voters of Missouri. The stakes are enormous. They directly concern the daily operation of the state and most municipal governments. Attempting to eliminate taxes by initiative petition is irresponsible. It is also potentially dangerous to the basic programs on which so many people depend.

If the tax is rolled back on food and drugs, it would cost the cities and the state at least $150 million annually. Some estimates run as high as $180 million. Missouri, as well as the cities, already is hard-pressed financially. If such an amount were cut from the present budgets, the impact would be catastrophic on education, mental health, welfare and all other services.

Obviously the lost income would have to be made up by higher taxes elsewhere. No elected official—and that goes for both the Legislature and the executive branch—could survive in office if he allowed vital programs to disintegrate.

A possible solution would be to double the sales tax on all items except food and drugs. This reveals the fallacy of the sponsors, who seem to assume that "needy" people buy nothing but food and drugs. Also it should be pointed out that those who are in genuine need are already receiving aid in welfare payments. In addition, about $15.5 million is spent annually by Missouri for medicine for welfare recipients. The food stamp program also provides much help.

Since there is no way to know which taxes would be raised to compensate for this staggering loss, if it materializes, it is impossible to predict who would pay more and who would pay less under a revised tax formula. But it seems safe to assume the final tax savings will be trivial regardless of how the formula is readjusted.

In the meantime the cities and the state will be put through a horrendous and unnecessary crunch. The contention that the needy will save up to 10 per cent of their income when the maximum, combined (city plus state) tax is 4 per cent is absurd.

If the sales tax on food and drugs is ever to be removed in Missouri, the action should follow a careful study of the economic impact of the decision—plus a precise plan to offset the lost revenue. None of this has occurred. Those who have circulated the petitions show no regard for the consequences.

This proposition can be defeated. But that will take a major and sustained educational effort in the time that remains before November. Most Missourians are sensible and practical people. After all of the facts are laid out before them, it seems unlikely a majority will approve a scheme that is nothing more than a gimmick—but a highly destructive one for this state.

XXX

TO HELP NOBODY

Good intentions but not common sense are behind the initiative petition now being circulated to slash $150 million to $180 million from state revenue.

The good intentions are glistening with the prospect of what the petition seeks to accomplish—help the needy by ending the Missouri sales tax on food and medicine.

The common sense being overlooked is just this:

When you slash such a huge sum from state revenues by ending one source of taxation, you are forcing the use of another source of taxation to replace it.

That is common sense.

Further, it is common sense to recognize that ending the sales tax on food and medicine doesn't really do what the people circulating the petitions want done. They want to help people at the welfare level.

The amount of help offered by ending the sales tax on food and medicine is truly minor. Keep in mind that the state is already helping welfare recipients in a major way to pay for medicine and food. As a matter of fact, between food stamps and welfare funds supplied the needy for medicine, our truly needy are not being overlooked.

Keep in mind, the needy—the truly needy—are the very few people in Missouri buying food and medicine. So, in the end, it is those people best able to pay who will benefit the most by ending the sales tax on food and medicine. They will benefit most until a new tax is passed.

For these reasons we hope you will look hard at the petitions if you are asked to sign one; and please think hard when you vote on the issue in November. We believe Missourians will do a far more constructive job for each other including our truly needy, by not signing the petition, by voting against the proposal.

LONELINESS

Soul cries to soul in blind and helpless anguish,
But lips are latched, locked tight, afraid to speak.
Hearts yearn for kindness, love and understanding,
But do not know the route to what they seek.

Where are you now, my lost and lonely brother?
Are you near? If I reach out, extend my hand,
Will you defrost the frigid silence of your face,
Smile, speak and try to understand?

Button Plan Sews Up Prevention Of A War

by Art Buchwald

(Art Buchwald was so disappointed he was't chosen as President Ford's running mate that he has decided to take a few weeks off. He left behind some of his all-time favorite columns.)

One of the things everyone has to worry about these days is the danger of an accidental war being set off with nuclear weapons. The best-selling book "Fail-Safe," by Eugene Burdick and Harvey Wheeler, deals with this problem when a group of American bombers have gone past their fail-safe point and, because of some foul-up in a little black box, the bombers haven't gotten the word to come back. They are scheduled to blow up Moscow. To show the Russians it's all an accident, the President of the United States blows up New York, even though his wife is there on a shopping trip.

But there is another school in Washington that insists there are so many safeguards on atomic weapons that even if someone wanted to fire one he wouldn't be able to do it.

Here is how this school sees it. In order to start a war, someone will have to push a button. To safeguard that no one will push the button accidentally, it is hidden every week in a different spot.

Only two people, both low-ranking military officers from different branches of the armed services, know the location of the button -- but they don't know each other. Each has the authority to push the button when ordered to do so from higher up. But if both their thumbs are not on the button at the same time, it will not work.

Now let us suppose, by some stretch of the imagination, both men accidentally meet at the same location at the same time and both decide to push the button at the same time. This does not automatically start World War III. When the button is pushed, all it does is turn on a green light in the bombproff, radiation-shielded, underground shelter in a secret palace near Cheyenne, Wyo The shelter is manned by an enlisted WAC and an enlisted WAVE, each of whom has a key to a white Princess tlelephone. As soon as they see the green light, they dial a secret number in South Dakota and say, "Condition Green."

This information is passed on to the quartermaster of the base, who immediately tries to contact Washington. But since he doesn't have the area code number for Washington, he can't dial directly. So he sends the message by carrier pigeon. This is known as "Condition Red."

As soon as the pigeon arrives in Washington, the secretary of defense is notified, and he in turn informs the President.

But the President cannot give the signal to do anything without turning a switch and there are seven locks on the switch. Each member of the President's family has a key to one of the locks and the switch cannot be pulled unless all the locks are opened at the same time. Since the family is never in Washington all at the same time, it is virtually impossible for the President to pull the siwtch.

Therefore, the chances of an accidental or even an intentional war are remote and shouldn't give anyone any sleepless nights. If it weren't for all these safeguards, I'd be worried too.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- Mafia mobster John Roselli may have taken the secret of the John F. Kennedy assassination with him to his death. He was brutally murdered a few weeks ago, his hacked-up body stuffed into an oil drum and dumped into Miami's Biscayne Bay.

Before he died, Roselli hinted to associates that he knew who had arranged President Kennedy's murder. It was the same conspirators, he suggested, whom he had recruited earlier to kill Cuban Premier Fidel Castro.

By Roselli's cryptic account, Castro learned the identity of the underworld contacts in Havana who had been trying to knock him off. He believed, not altogether without basis, that President Kennedy was behind the plot.

The Cuban leader, as the supreme irony, decided to turn the tables and use the same crowd to arrange Kennedy's assassination, according to Roselli's scenario. To save their skins, the plotters lined up Lee Harvey Oswald to pull the trigger.

Roselli could never be pinned down on names or details. It was also difficult to assess whether he knew what he was talking about or whether he merely described what he thought might have happened. Certainly there is no real evidence to support Roselli's story. But there are enough curious circumstances to justify telling it. Here are the fascinating highlights.

The ruggedly handsome Roselli, a flamboyant mobster with underworld contacts in Havana, was recruited by the Central Intelligence Agency in 1960 to assassinate Castro. He had no authority, however, over the underworld elements in Havana.

They were under the loose control of Florida's Mafia chieftan, Santos Trafficante. His gambling enterprises in Havana had been closed down by Castro after the 1959 revolution. In fact, Trafficante had been lodged for a period in a Cuban jail, an indignity that didn't endear Castro to him.

After Trafficante made it back to his Florida haunts, he left part of his organization behind in Havana. Some of his henchmen even managed to develop contacts in Castro's inner circle. These were the people Roselli wanted to use to knock off Castro.

But Roselli didn't have the stature inside the Mafia to make the necessary arrangements with Trafficante. So Roselli called in his patron, the Chicago godfather Sam "Momo" Giancana, to deal with Trafficante.

As Roselli's associates tell it, he persuaded Giancana that it would be to their advantage to win the good will of the CIA. Convinced, Giancana flew down to Florida to make the preliminary arrangements.

He was in the middle of these delicate dealings, incidentally, when he learned that his favorite girl friend, singer Phyllis McGuire, had developed a romantic attachment in Las Vegas to comedian Dan Rowan. Enraged, Giancana wanted to fly straight to Las Vegas and end the romance.

But Robert Maheu, who had recruited Roselli for the CIA, talked Giancana out of it by offering to bug Rowan's hotel room and promising the angry mobster a full report.

Once Giancana and Trafficante set it up, Roselli used the Havana underworld to plot Castro's demise. At first, they tried to plant poison pills, supplied by the CIA, in Castro's food. The pills would have made it appear that he died of natural causes. When this failed, snipers were dispatched to a Havana rooftop. They were caught.

The word reached Roselli that some of the plotters had been tortured and that Castro had learned about the whole operation.

The CIA called off the Roselli operation in March, 1963, but recruited a Castro associate named Rolando Cubela to murder Castro.

In an impromptu, three-hour interview with Associated Press reporter Daniel Harker, Castro indicated that he knew about the attempts on his life and warned that U.S. leaders also might not be safe. That was September 7, 1963.

According to Roselli, Castro enlisted the same underworld elements whom he had caught plotting against him. They supposedly were Cubans from the old Trafficante organization. Working with Cuban intelligence, they allegedly lined up an ex-Marine sharpshooter named Lee Harvey Oswald, who had been active in the pro-Castro movement.

According to Roselli's version, Oswald may have shot Kennedy or may have acted as a decoy while others ambushed him from closer range. When Oswald was picked up, Roselli suggested, the underworld conspirators feared he would crack and disclose information that might lead to them. This almost certainly would have brought a massive U.S. crackdown on the Mafia.

So Jack Ruby was ordered to eliminate Oswald, making it appear as an act of reprisal against the President's killer. At least this is how Roselli explained the tragedy in Dallas.

There is no proof, of course. But there is some corroborative, circumstantial evidence. It has been established, for example, that Oswald visited the Cuban consulate in Mexico City two months before the dreadful day in Dallas. An informant named Sylva Duran first stated, then denied, that she had overheard the Cubans speak to Oswald about assassinating someone and had seen them slip him some money.

Several key CIA officials believed that Castro was behind the Kennedy assassination. Two days after the shooting, the CIA cabled from Mexico City that Ambassador Thomas Mann felt the Soviets were too sophisticated to participate in a direct assassination of the President but that the Cubans would have been stupid enough to recruit Oswald.

It has also been established that Jack Ruby indeed had been in Cuba and had connections in the Havana underworld. One CIA cable, dated November 28, 1963, reported that "an American gangster-type named Ruby" had visited Santos Trafficante in his Cuban prison.

Roselli was questioned about the Kennedy assassination behind closed doors by the Senate Intelligence Committee. The transcript is stamped "Top Secret." We can report, however, that Roselli did not tell the senators the same story that he had confided to associates. He said it was his opinion that the plot against Castro had backfired and that Castro had arranged for Kennedy's death. But Roselli stressed that this was merely his own speculation.

Sens. Richard Schweiker, R.-Pa. and Howard Baker, R.-Tenn., indicated that they believed Roselli was holding back information. But the mobster insisted he could give them nothing but his opinion.

Footnote: As to the Giancana episode, Maheu refused comment. A spokesman for Rowan said he and Miss McGuire were "just old friends. There was no hot romance." Miss McGurie could not be reached. On Roselli's tale of the Cuban connection, David Belin, Assistant Counsel of the Warren Commission, said he believed Jack Ruby was "not conspiratorially involved." He said he knew of no direct evidence of domestic or foreign conspiracy in the assassination of President Kennedy.

AT WORK OR PLAY—Striking cotton knit shirt in navy, rust, orange and tan with contrasting tan ventile collar and an A-line cotton madras skirt, left, allow for all the fashionable flair one could want. Styled for the activist, the skirt features a button waist, front pleat and is lined. Great-to-tuck-in window pane cotton shirt, center, comes with its own new look, detachable stock tie. The short sleeve cotton knit shirt, right in a number of smashing colors trimmed with a white neck tab and collar, and sueded cotton drawstring pants with two front pockets, are both comfortable and good looking. # Group opposes proposed sewage treatment plant location

MALDEN — Engineers met a united front of opposition at a public hearing Aug. 31 when they presented plans for a sewage treatment plant which they proposed be located west of town.

About 30 citizens attended the hearing at city hall, along with Board of Public Works members and representatives of Trotter & Associates, consulting engineers of Dexter.

While opposition to the location of the plant was unanimous, those who spoke generally emphasized they realize that Malden must do something about its sewage treatment facilities, which are in violation of state and federal standards. As several said, they "are not opposed to progress."

The hearing was conducted in a calm atmosphere, with each speaker identifying himself before stating his case to the engineers.

Gary L. Gaines of Trotter & Associates opened the hour and a half meeting by updating the citizens on the status of Malden's sewage treatment facilities, telling why the system is not meeting federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and Missouri standards.

Gaines said tightening-up of laws relating to the environment and pollution has led to the present situation. The engineer outlined Malden's three alternatives:

1. Construct an oxidation ditch and treatment plant west of the city, north of J Highway on a 13-acre tract of land (this was the only concrete proposal submitted by Trotter at the hearing), while abandoning Plant No. 1, located on the southeast edge of town on Highway 62.

This plant, the engineers said, is well maintained and properly operated, but it emits an odor and the effluent (outflow) violates federal and state law. The plant was built in 1937 and is overloaded, according to a "facilities plan" prepared by Trotter. Plant No. 1 serves 90 per cent of Malden's residential area, 70 per cent of the commercial development and one major industry.

2. The second choice would be to renovate Plant No. 1 and construct an oxidation ditch plant.

3. The third alternative is a combination of the first two. Plant No. 2, located in the Malden Industrial Park is being renovated under Industrial Park Improvements Projects funded by the Economic Development Administration of the Department of Commerce. This plant, built in 1941, was virtually unused for eight years and its equipment fell into disrepair.

Because Plant No. 1 now does the bulk of the work, Plant No. 2 is underloaded and currently meets state and federal standards.

Comparative costs of the choices—abandoning Plant No. 1 and building a facility west of Malden, would total $1,610,000, while remodeling Plant No. 1 and constructing an oxidation ditch plant to the west is estimated at $1,683,000. Yearly operation of the first alternative would be about $57,000; the second choice would cost about $80,000 annually to operate.

Gaines stressed that Trotter's proposal was being made from a purely engineering standpoint, taking into consideration the cost factor while projecting Malden's population by the year 1997.

Darryl Orr, Trotter engineer, told the hearing that the city's population by that year should be about 8,200—a figure disputed by Don Hamra, 907 W. Park, who said Malden's population should reach 9,600 by about 1990.

Hamra, former member of the Planning and Zoning Commission, said locating the sewage treatment plant at the suggested site would hinder growth in that area, which he said is subject to flooding.

The majority of the objections raised to the location were connected with citizen contentions that the area is flood-prone, citing a newspaper article describing the high water there in 1972-73.

John A. Howell, 401 North Marion St., raised one of the major objections to the proposed site. He said he represented owners of the tract of land to be used for building the western disposal plant. Howell, in a written statement, said Trotter's facilities plan contained conflicts.

For example, Howell's statement quoted the plan as saying, "Urban land will develop in a direction...away from the sewage treatment plant." Howell also said, "The engineers say the city is developing to the west, so put the treatment plant in that area."

Howell said he has checked and found that, under some conditions, the plant will smell and could breed bacteria. Prevailing winds would bring the smell into Malden, Howell continued, adding that a plant malfunction would bring problems. He suggested that another site be found.

William Cohen, 401 Palo Verde Drive, said he opposes any type of sewage treatment using Ditch No. 14. Cohen said overflow and stagnation of the ditch were proven occurrences and that citizens want a guarantee this won't happen. He also cited possible health hazards and the lowering of property value should the plant be built at its proposed location.

Gaines who replied to each citizen's comments, said the outflow from the plant would "be as clean as the water in the ditch" and that the plant will be "the most modern thing available." He explained that the plant can be built with a minimum of odor and that sewer trunk lines in the western area "would increase residential property values," not decrease them.

Workshop board members are named

BLOOMFIELD — The Stoddard County Court has named the initial nine-member board of directors for the recently approved Stoddard County Sheltered Workshop.

The nine board members are: the Rev. Raymond Duffey of Bloomfield, Margaret Jones of Advance, Mary Lou Huey of Puxico, Virginia Niemcyzk of Bell City, Lendal Buttry of Bernie, Tom Taylor of Essex, Joe Weber and Kenneth Minton of Dexter and Leslie Norman of Bernie.

The board will meet later this month for an organizational meeting, it was noted.

The laws covering county sheltered workshops state that the County Court appoints the board of directors and that the board selects its own officers and leadership.

All nine members are appointed for a one-year term.

Sheltered Workshop board members, are not elected, but all nine members are appointed annually, probably from the Sept. 1 date, it was noted. Board members may be reappointed, or the court could appoint an entirely new board each year.

Board members serve one-year terms without compensation, under provisions of the state statutes.

Voters approved a Stoddard County Sheltered Workshop overwhelmingly in the Aug. 3 primary election, setting the stage for the County Court.

The tax levy for support and maintenance of the sheltered workshop, 10 cents per $100 assessed valuation, will be included in the 1976 tax bills, county officials noted.

Deadly Wind

The cyclone that hit Darwin, Australia, on Christmas Day, 1974, reached wind speeds of up to 160 miles per hour. The storm killed 50 people and destroyed 90 per cent of the city on Australia's remote north coast. An airlift evacuated half the 45,000 population.

Labor director plans to work against red tape

By JIM CLOUD
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — While bureaucratic "red tape" is a concept no government official actively supports, Ms. Betty Adams plans to go beyond a mere "voice vote" against it.

Ms. Adams, who was appointed director of Missouri Department of Labor and Industrial Relations in August, says she plans to be accessible to Missourians who deal with the department and to keep the individual in mind when she makes decisions.

"I plan to see how the person in some far corner of Missouri will be affected by what we are doing," Ms. Adams says.

The labor and industrial relations department deals directly with more citizens than most of the other 12 state departments. The department administers workmen's compensation, enforces state labor laws, pays unemployment insurance benefits and operates 40 local offices to locate jobs for people.

Ms. Adams says her position as department director will be a 26 hours a day, eight days a week job. "I've never had the kind of job that terminates when you are off duty. If they can't find me in my office they can come and get me at home."

Ms. Adams, 39, is the first woman and the first black to be appointed as a department director since state reorganization in 1974.

Before becoming director of the labor and industrial relations department Ms. Adams was the chairwoman of the Commission on the Status of Women, which is a division of the department she now heads. At the same time she was employed as a management specialist in the office of administration's division of budget and planning.

Ms. Adams was associate dean of students and director of the university center at Lincoln University from 1965 to 1974.

Her frankness and candor make her a standout among state officials. "I don't mind playing the devil's advocate by taking a position that I don't feel at gut level. Debate brings out both sides of an issue," she says.

Earlier intentions to become a lawyer "explain my argumentative behavior," Ms. Adams says. But, she says she also places a lot of value on listening.

Listening is what Ms. Adams says she intends to do for the first six months as department head. First of all she says she will work with the department's division directors to act on any matters that must be considered immediately and to project work facing the department in the near future.

The transition into the job of department director should not be too difficult since the department is well structured and has had good leadership in the past, Ms. Adams says.

Ms. Adams says she plans to help the taxpayer by cutting costs and consolidating services. "Whether it involves general revenue or federal funds, I will always be looking for a less costly way to do it."

SeMo U educator participates in an experimental seminar

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Dr. Louise Reddick, chairperson of the newly formed department of management at Southeast Missouri State University, was one of 30 persons from across the nation who participated recently in an experimental seminar on international business.

The seminar was held at George Washington University in Washington, D.C., under the sponsorship of the U.S. Department of State, the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business, and the Academy of International Business.

All participants were members of the management faculty at various colleges and universities.

Seminar activities included presentations by recognized experts on international business; presentations by officials from the U.S. Departments of Commerce, Treasury, Labor and State; visits to various Washington offices; and group discussions.

The American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of of Business is the professional accrediting association for schools and colleges of business. According to Dr. Reddick, part of the impetus for the meeting came from several members of the assembly "who recognize the growing need to expand the international component in management education."

Recommendations of the Brookings Report on "The International Dimension of Management Education" also created interest in such a meeting, she said.

Dr. Reddick has been a member of the Southeast Missouri State faculty since 1969. A full professor, she earned her bachelor's degree at Texas Christian University in Fort Worth, her master's degree at the University of Texas in Augstin and her doctorate at North Texas State University at Denton.

Group opposes proposed sewage treatment plant location

MALDEN — Engineers met a united front of opposition at a public hearing Aug. 31 when they presented plans for a sewage treatment plant which they proposed be located west of town.

About 30 citizens attended the hearing at city hall, along with Board of Public Works members and representatives of Trotter & Associates, consulting engineers of Dexter.

While opposition to the location of the plant was unanimous, those who spoke generally emphasized they realize that Malden must do something about its sewage treatment facilities, which are in violation of state and federal standards. As several said, they "are not opposed to progress."

The hearing was conducted in a calm atmosphere, with each speaker identifying himself before stating his case to the engineers.

Gary L. Gaines of Trotter & Associates opened the hour and a half meeting by updating the citizens on the status of Malden's sewage treatment facilities, telling why the system is not meeting federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and Missouri standards.

Gaines said tightening-up of laws relating to the environment and pollution has led to the present situation. The engineer outlined Malden's three alternatives:

1. Construct an oxidation ditch and treatment plant west of the city, north of J Highway on a 13-acre tract of land (this was the only concrete proposal submitted by Trotter at the hearing), while abandoning Plant No. 1, located on the southeast edge of town on Highway 62.

This plant, the engineers said, is well maintained and properly operated, but it emits an odor and the effluent (outflow) violates federal and state law. The plant was built in 1937 and is overloaded, according to a "facilities plan" prepared by Trotter. Plant No. 1 serves 90 per cent of Malden's residential area, 70 per cent of the commercial development and one major industry.

2. The second choice would be to renovate Plant No. 1 and construct an oxidation ditch plant.

3. The third alternative is a combination of the first two. Plant No. 2, located in the Malden Industrial Park is being renovated under Industrial Park Improvements Projects funded by the Economic Development Administration of the Department of Commerce. This plant, built in 1941, was virtually unused for eight years and its equipment fell into disrepair.

Because Plant No. 1 now does the bulk of the work, Plant No. 2 is underloaded and currently meets state and federal standards.

Comparative costs of the choices—abandoning Plant No. 1 and building a facility west of Malden, would total $1,610,000, while remodeling Plant No. 1 and constructing an oxidation ditch plant to the west is estimated at $1,683,000. Yearly operation of the first alternative would be about $57,000; the second choice would cost about $80,000 annually to operate.

Gaines stressed that Trotter's proposal was being made from a purely engineering standpoint, taking into consideration the cost factor while projecting Malden's population by the year 1997.

Darryl Orr, Trotter engineer, told the hearing that the city's population by that year should be about 8,200—a figure disputed by Don Hamra, 907 W. Park, who said Malden's population should reach 9,600 by about 1990.

Hamra, former member of the Planning and Zoning Commission, said locating the sewage treatment plant at the suggested site would hinder growth in that area, which he said is subject to flooding.

The majority of the objections raised to the location were connected with citizen contentions that the area is flood-prone, citing a newspaper article describing the high water there in 1972-73.

John A. Howell, 401 North Marion St., raised one of the major objections to the proposed site. He said he represented owners of the tract of land to be used for building the western disposal plant. Howell, in a written statement, said Trotter's facilities plan contained conflicts.

For example, Howell's statement quoted the plan as saying, "Urban land will develop in a direction...away from the sewage treatment plant." Howell also said, "The engineers say the city is developing to the west, so put the treatment plant in that area."

Howell said he has checked and found that, under some conditions, the plant will smell and could breed bacteria. Prevailing winds would bring the smell into Malden, Howell continued, adding that a plant malfunction would bring problems. He suggested that another site be found.

William Cohen, 401 Palo Verde Drive, said he opposes any type of sewage treatment using Ditch No. 14. Cohen said overflow and stagnation of the ditch were proven occurrences and that citizens want a guarantee this won't happen. He also cited possible health hazards and the lowering of property value should the plant be built at its proposed location.

Gaines who replied to each citizen's comments, said the outflow from the plant would "be as clean as the water in the ditch" and that the plant will be "the most modern thing available." He explained that the plant can be built with a minimum of odor and that sewer trunk lines in the western area "would increase residential property values," not decrease them.

Workshop board members are named

BLOOMFIELD — The Stoddard County Court has named the initial nine-member board of directors for the recently approved Stoddard County Sheltered Workshop.

The nine board members are: the Rev. Raymond Duffey of Bloomfield, Margaret Jones of Advance, Mary Lou Huey of Puxico, Virginia Niemcyzk of Bell City, Lendal Buttry of Bernie, Tom Taylor of Essex, Joe Weber and Kenneth Minton of Dexter and Leslie Norman of Bernie.

The board will meet later this month for an organizational meeting, it was noted.

The laws covering county sheltered workshops state that the County Court appoints the board of directors and that the board selects its own officers and leadership.

All nine members are appointed for a one-year term.

Sheltered Workshop board members, are not elected, but all nine members are appointed annually, probably from the Sept. 1 date, it was noted. Board members may be reappointed, or the court could appoint an entirely new board each year.

Board members serve one-year terms without compensation, under provisions of the state statutes.

Voters approved a Stoddard County Sheltered Workshop overwhelmingly in the Aug. 3 primary election, setting the stage for the County Court.

The tax levy for support and maintenance of the sheltered workshop, 10 cents per $100 assessed valuation, will be included in the 1976 tax bills, county officials noted.

Deadly Wind

The cyclone that hit Darwin, Australia, on Christmas Day, 1974, reached wind speeds of up to 160 miles per hour. The storm killed 50 people and destroyed 90 per cent of the city on Australia's remote north coast. An airlift evacuated half the 45,000 population.

Couple feted with dinner

MOREHOUSE — Mr. and Mrs. J.C. "Bud" Sutton of Morehouse were honored recently with a surprise dinner and dance in honor of their 25th wedding anniversary. The event was held at the Sikeston Knights of Columbus Hall.

Hosting the dinner were the couple's five sons, Danny and Joe Sutton of Sikeston and Scott, Kevin and Tom Sutton of Morehouse. Friends of the couple, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Ernst and Mr. and Mrs. L.E. King of Morehouse were also hosts.

Birthdays noted

Christopher Michael Porter

Christopher Michael Porter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael L. Porter, 904 Crescent Drive, celebrated his first birthday Aug. 24 at his home. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Bridger, 800 Ladue Drive and Loretta Masters of Sikeston Route One and great-grandson of Eva James of Sikeston.

Guests at the party included Jennifer Bridger, Farah Bridger, Tracy Story, Teresa Story, Corry Jobe, Kim Bridger, Max Davidson, Sane Davidson, Pat Bridger and Maxine Berry.

Tina Smith

Scout uniform exchange

All mothers who have daughters in the Girl Scouts will have an opportunity to buy or sell uniforms or other items Wednesday and Thursday at the basement of the Mid Delta Agency, 315 N. New Madrid.

Those wishing to sell uniforms or other items should bring them to the Mid Delta Agency from 9 a.m.-noon Wednesday or Thursday. Items may be purchased on the same days from 3 to 5 p.m. Adult uniforms are needed.

Yard winners announced

NEW MADRID — Yard-of-the-month honors announced for September went to Johnny Coon, 746 Mott St. in Ward One; James Mauk, 1340 Scott St. in Ward Two; and Al Hendricks, 601 Pinnell Lane in Ward Three, according to Mrs. Caroline Phillips, chairman of the beautification project sponsored by the New Madrid Woman's Club.

Yards receiving honorable mention in each of the wards included Bill Thurman, Highway 61 south and Elsie Stepp, 711 Waters St., in Ward One; Walter Edwards Jr., 720 Scott St. and Monroe Robbins, 1001 Scott St. in Ward Two; and Gallivan Hunter, 640 Pinnell Lane and Ralph Barnwell Sr., 151 St. Matthews Lane, in Ward Three.

Sexual 'reassignment' difficult process

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — It is a long and lonely journey across the border of sex, but thousands feel they must make the trip.

They are transsexuals, people with the mind of one sex imprisoned in the body of the other. This tragic mismatch can produce a state of misery that drives such people to drastic action: sex change through surgery and a reversal of life styles.

Perhaps 3,000 persons in the United States have been sexually reassigned, as doctors call it, mainly in the last 10 years as the surgery has become widely available. At Stanford University Medical Center, one of the most active institutions in sexual reassignment, more than 150 persons have undergone the hormone therapy and plastic surgery.

Doctors have a hard time evaluating how much transsexuals are helped by the switch, because so many disappear and cut all their old ties.

Nevertheless, the Stanford specialists feel that their patients — carefully selected from thousands of applicants — have generally been helped. Some feel whole and happy for the first time in their lives, showing "major improvements" in sexual function and psychological adjustment, said Dr. Norman Fisk. Vocationally there also is some improvement, said Fisk, a Palo Alto psychiatrist and co-director of the Stanford program.

Few if any regret what they did, he said, though two patients later reverted to their pre-surgical sex roles.

Sexual reassignment is currently performed at some 20 centers in 17 states. One of the pioneering institutions was Johns Hopkins Medical School, where sex-change surgery began in 1966. In an evaluation two years ago, doctors were more qualified in their enthusiasm than are their Stanford counterparts.

Although some of the patients did "extraordinarily well" after surgery, said a Hopkins report, others did "extraordinarily poorly," falling into self-destructive relationships, drug abuse, suicide attempts.

Drs. Jon K. Meyer and John E. Hoopes said a post-surgical euphoria in many patients drained away two to five years later, as they realized the switch was not a cure-all for personal troubles.

"Sex reassignment surgery seems to temporarily palliate an unfortunate emotional state, rather than really cure the problem of gender dysphoria," they wrote.

Gender dysphoria is a term that means unhappiness of an intense and overriding degree about one's sex. In some persons — estimated at one in 10,000 to one in 100,000 births — this dissatisfaction is so strong that there is a feeling of revulsion at one's own sexual organs and a compelling wish to be of the other sex.

These people are called transsexuals. Dr. Renee Richards, the male-to-female eye doctor who recently stirred up controversy in the tennis world by daring to compete as a woman, expressed the transsexual dilemma:

"Emotionally the desire to be a woman and a girl had been a most overwhelming drive ever since I can remember."

The causes of the disorder are not known, though Fisk believes the answer is to be found in the development of the brain before birth.

Cancer research comes first with female climber

EVEREST BASE CAMP, Nepal (AP) - Arlene Blum hopes to be the first American woman to climb Mt. Everest, but she says cancer research is more important to her.

"My research is very important to me, more important than mountaineering," said the 31-year-old biochemist from Berkeley, Calif., one of the two women in the 11-member American Bicentennial Everest Expedition.

Huddled in a tent as the snow fell on the base camp 11,500 feet below the peak of the world's highest mountain, Ms. Blum was reading over an advance copy of her article "Flame Retardant Additives as Possible Cancer Hazards." A runner had just brought it with the mail.

"My research on chemicals in the evironment that may cause cancer is so satisfying," she said. "I think I can really help people this way. We spend so much money on trying to find cures for cancer but very little on the prevention of it. I really was reluctant to leave my work to come to Everest."

Earlier that day, draped with crampons, ice axe and a rope, and wearing a floppy zebra-striped sun hat, she returned delightedly from several hours of work in the Khumbu ice fall, the treacherous icy gateway to the world's highest peak.

"I love being there," she said, tired but smiling. "I'm really getting excited about climbing."

On the three-week march from Katmandu to the base camp, as she trudged up the slippery trails, Ms. Blum could be heard championing her favorite causes: legislation requiring that cigarettes extinguish quickly to reduce fire risk; regulation of chemicals in hair dyes and fabrics that may cause cancer; population control in developing countries where she has traveled and climbed.

And equality for women climbers.

Ms. Blum is a strong believer in equal rights high up in the mountains, and daily there have been incidents that rankle the feminist in her.

Shortly after arriving at the base camp, the Sherpa guides asked for some climbers to accompany them to the base of the ice fall for a ceremony to the mountain deities. Ms. Blum was pointedly ignored when she offered to go.

She also felt slighted when she was not selected for the first two days of work to make the route through the ice fall. She finally managed to go on the second day.

But Ms. Blum feels herself to be an equal member of the expedition.

She is big — 5-feet-10 — and strong, has climbed higher before than any of the other Americans, and so far has stayed in good health, unlike some of the men who have been plagued by diarrhea and colds.

Price, not ingredients, is key to product selection

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Americans are paying more attention to what goes into the food they eat these days, but supermarket shoppers still look for price and brand name before they check for ingredients or nutritional value.

That's one of the findings of a report by the consumer studies division of the Food and Drug Administration, which surveyed people in 1973 and again in 1975 to try to find out how much consumers know about food and nutrition.

Among the questions in the recently-released report was one asking people what they paid attention to when shopping for food.

Price was the item named most often. Almost three-fourths of those surveyed both in 1973 and 1975 said they looked at the cost of the item.

Brand name was second on the list, but it apparently is declining in importance. Fifty-eight per cent of those surveyed in 1973 and 54 per cent of those checked in 1975 said they paid attention to the brand name of a product.

The biggest change was in the number of people looking for some kind of date on the package — indicating either when the product was made or by when it should be used. Fifty-nine per cent of those questioned in 1975 said they paid attention to the date of manufacture or expiration, an increase of 16 percentage points from 1973.

Interest in nutritional value also increased. Only 27 per cent of those checked in 1973 said they looked for the calories, vitamins and minerals in a product; 41 per cent of the 1975 group said they paid attention to nutrition.

The number of people who paid attention to ingredient lists rose by five percentage points — from 42 per cent in 1973 to 47 per cent in 1975. Twenty-six per cent of those surveyed last year said they paid attention to the proportion of the major ingredient in a product — how much beef in canned beef goulash, for example. That was an increase of eight percentage points from 1973.

The FDA has been trying to learn what consumers think of nutritional labeling — now required for manufacturers who make a nutritional claim for their products — and whether shoppers actually will use the information. Some food industry officials claim there is not enough interest among the general public to justify the added costs.

While the regulators, the industry and the public debate what should — or shouldn't appear on the label — the AGRICULTURAL Research Center in Greenbelt, Md., is trying to determine exactly what goes into some 60,000 food items.

The center is setting up a Nutrient Composition Laboratory with an $800,000 annual budget and a staff of 36 scientists as part of its Nutrition Institute headed by Dr. Walter Mertz.

"We are not making value judgements," said Mertz. "But we do want to know what's going on."

Ann Landers

Grief ruining her marriage

Dear Ann Landers: Please tell me how a wife who has so much to be thankful for can behave like such a rotten, worthless shrew. I am referring to myself.

I love my husband very much. He is a kind and gentle man with so many good qualities. My problem began last May when I went to the hospital to have our first child. I was 34 years old and we had tried for five years to have a family. Our joy was indescribable.

When I awakened from surgery they told me our baby was born dead. I cried for hours. When my husband came to see me I couln't look at him. I was so filled with anger and hate I ordered him to leave.

Time has not helped. I still have these feelings of hostility toward my husband although I know he is not to blame. Sex is out of the question because of my anger. I realize I'm being unfair to him but I can't control my feelings. I am unable to discuss this problem with anyone because I'm a very private person. I realize I'm destroying my marriage and it's the only thing I have to live for. Please give me some advice. -- Cracking Up In Delaware

Dear Friend: You are a sick woman who should be ventilating her anger with a therapist.

I urge you to ask your obstetrician to suggest a psychiatrist who specializes in problems such as yours.

Please don't lose another minute. You should have gone into treatment last May.

Dear Ann Landers: This is in reply to the letter from "Concerned" who was worried that she might get Negro blood when she had a transfusion in the hospital. For two years I was seriously ill with a liver condition. I was in and out of the hospital several times. The last time I went into a coma. Even my wonderful doctor had doubts that I would make it.

Thanks to his skill and determination, plus a lot of help from God and BLOOD DONORS, I have recovered and am now in excellent health.

During those two long years I received 54 pints of blood from unknown donors. If I could meet them, I would kiss each and every one. I couldn't care less about their color, sex, religion or anything else. -- Grateful in Ohio

Dear Grate: Dozens of people wrote to express the same sentiments, but you said it best.

And now -- how many of you readers out there have donated a pint of blood lately? It's a precious gift -- and only YOU can give it. Contact any hospital and make an appointment -- today.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a secretary for a repair shop. The men who are employed here do mostly residential work.

Recently several customers have called and complained that after the work was completed, some items were missing from their homes. Four men whom I hold in high regard have confided that the boss's son is the one with the sticky fingers.

The question: Who should tell the boss? Me? The foreman? Everybody? We're all afraid of what might happen. But we can't let this continue. Help ! -- Steal or Squeal

Dear S Or S: YOU should tell the kid with the sticky fingers. Let him know if any more complaints come in that his dad must be notified.

Sexual 'reassignment' difficult process

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — It is a long and lonely journey across the border of sex, but thousands feel they must make the trip.

They are transsexuals, people with the mind of one sex imprisoned in the body of the other. This tragic mismatch can produce a state of misery that drives such people to drastic action: sex change through surgery and a reversal of life styles.

Perhaps 3,000 persons in the United States have been sexually reassigned, as doctors call it, mainly in the last 10 years as the surgery has become widely available. At Stanford University Medical Center, one of the most active institutions in sexual reassignment, more than 150 persons have undergone the hormone therapy and plastic surgery.

Doctors have a hard time evaluating how much transsexuals are helped by the switch, because so many disappear and cut all their old ties.

Nevertheless, the Stanford specialists feel that their patients — carefully selected from thousands of applicants — have generally been helped. Some feel whole and happy for the first time in their lives, showing "major improvements" in sexual function and psychological adjustment, said Dr. Norman Fisk. Vocationally there also is some improvement, said Fisk, a Palo Alto psychiatrist and co-director of the Stanford program.

Few if any regret what they did, he said, though two patients later reverted to their pre-surgical sex roles.

Sexual reassignment is currently performed at some 20 centers in 17 states. One of the pioneering institutions was Johns Hopkins Medical School, where sex-change surgery began in 1966. In an evaluation two years ago, doctors were more qualified in their enthusiasm than are their Stanford counterparts.

Although some of the patients did "extraordinarily well" after surgery, said a Hopkins report, others did "extraordinarily poorly," falling into self-destructive relationships, drug abuse, suicide attempts.

Drs. Jon K. Meyer and John E. Hoopes said a post-surgical euphoria in many patients drained away two to five years later, as they realized the switch was not a cure-all for personal troubles.

"Sex reassignment surgery seems to temporarily palliate an unfortunate emotional state, rather than really cure the problem of gender dysphoria," they wrote.

Gender dysphoria is a term that means unhappiness of an intense and overriding degree about one's sex. In some persons — estimated at one in 10,000 to one in 100,000 births — this dissatisfaction is so strong that there is a feeling of revulsion at one's own sexual organs and a compelling wish to be of the other sex.

These people are called transsexuals. Dr. Renee Richards, the male-to-female eye doctor who recently stirred up controversy in the tennis world by daring to compete as a woman, expressed the transsexual dilemma:

"Emotionally the desire to be a woman and a girl had been a most overwhelming drive ever since I can remember."

The causes of the disorder are not known, though Fisk believes the answer is to be found in the development of the brain before birth.

Cancer research comes first with female climber

EVEREST BASE CAMP, Nepal (AP) - Arlene Blum hopes to be the first American woman to climb Mt. Everest, but she says cancer research is more important to her.

"My research is very important to me, more important than mountaineering," said the 31-year-old biochemist from Berkeley, Calif., one of the two women in the 11-member American Bicentennial Everest Expedition.

Huddled in a tent as the snow fell on the base camp 11,500 feet below the peak of the world's highest mountain, Ms. Blum was reading over an advance copy of her article "Flame Retardant Additives as Possible Cancer Hazards." A runner had just brought it with the mail.

"My research on chemicals in the evironment that may cause cancer is so satisfying," she said. "I think I can really help people this way. We spend so much money on trying to find cures for cancer but very little on the prevention of it. I really was reluctant to leave my work to come to Everest."

Earlier that day, draped with crampons, ice axe and a rope, and wearing a floppy zebra-striped sun hat, she returned delightedly from several hours of work in the Khumbu ice fall, the treacherous icy gateway to the world's highest peak.

"I love being there," she said, tired but smiling. "I'm really getting excited about climbing."

On the three-week march from Katmandu to the base camp, as she trudged up the slippery trails, Ms. Blum could be heard championing her favorite causes: legislation requiring that cigarettes extinguish quickly to reduce fire risk; regulation of chemicals in hair dyes and fabrics that may cause cancer; population control in developing countries where she has traveled and climbed.

And equality for women climbers.

Ms. Blum is a strong believer in equal rights high up in the mountains, and daily there have been incidents that rankle the feminist in her.

Shortly after arriving at the base camp, the Sherpa guides asked for some climbers to accompany them to the base of the ice fall for a ceremony to the mountain deities. Ms. Blum was pointedly ignored when she offered to go.

She also felt slighted when she was not selected for the first two days of work to make the route through the ice fall. She finally managed to go on the second day.

But Ms. Blum feels herself to be an equal member of the expedition.

She is big — 5-feet-10 — and strong, has climbed higher before than any of the other Americans, and so far has stayed in good health, unlike some of the men who have been plagued by diarrhea and colds.

Price, not ingredients, is key to product selection

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Americans are paying more attention to what goes into the food they eat these days, but supermarket shoppers still look for price and brand name before they check for ingredients or nutritional value.

That's one of the findings of a report by the consumer studies division of the Food and Drug Administration, which surveyed people in 1973 and again in 1975 to try to find out how much consumers know about food and nutrition.

Among the questions in the recently-released report was one asking people what they paid attention to when shopping for food.

Price was the item named most often. Almost three-fourths of those surveyed both in 1973 and 1975 said they looked at the cost of the item.

Brand name was second on the list, but it apparently is declining in importance. Fifty-eight per cent of those surveyed in 1973 and 54 per cent of those checked in 1975 said they paid attention to the brand name of a product.

The biggest change was in the number of people looking for some kind of date on the package — indicating either when the product was made or by when it should be used. Fifty-nine per cent of those questioned in 1975 said they paid attention to the date of manufacture or expiration, an increase of 16 percentage points from 1973.

Interest in nutritional value also increased. Only 27 per cent of those checked in 1973 said they looked for the calories, vitamins and minerals in a product; 41 per cent of the 1975 group said they paid attention to nutrition.

The number of people who paid attention to ingredient lists rose by five percentage points — from 42 per cent in 1973 to 47 per cent in 1975. Twenty-six per cent of those surveyed last year said they paid attention to the proportion of the major ingredient in a product — how much beef in canned beef goulash, for example. That was an increase of eight percentage points from 1973.

The FDA has been trying to learn what consumers think of nutritional labeling — now required for manufacturers who make a nutritional claim for their products — and whether shoppers actually will use the information. Some food industry officials claim there is not enough interest among the general public to justify the added costs.

While the regulators, the industry and the public debate what should — or shouldn't appear on the label — the AGRICULTURAL Research Center in Greenbelt, Md., is trying to determine exactly what goes into some 60,000 food items.

The center is setting up a Nutrient Composition Laboratory with an $800,000 annual budget and a staff of 36 scientists as part of its Nutrition Institute headed by Dr. Walter Mertz.

Royals blow three-run lead

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Whitey Herzog was searching for a ray of sunshine in a suddenly gray, threatening world. He could not find it.

"We've been playing so poorly lately," sighed the Kansas City manager. "Maybe this will get us going. But we won't know until tomorrow."

What could have been a historic, as well as valuable victory exploded in the Royals' faces Monday night when the Texas Rangers scored four runs in the ninth inning to emerge with a 5-4 triumph.

The Royals were playing before 27,008 fans who had raised the season attendance to 1,401,121, breaking this city's 21-year-old record for major league ball.

Oakland, their closest pursuers in the American League West, had downed California earlier in the day. But the Royals, with Doug Bird pitching a five-hitter, sailed into the ninth with a 4-1 lead.

With two out and Roy Howell on base, Joe Lahoud lofted a single that put runners on the corners.

Reliever Mark Littel came in, issued a walk and gave up the game winning hit to Toby Harrah.

Serious tennis time at Open

"If you're going to beat me it has to be in the first round," said Connors. "That's the way I feel. I think I'm the man to beat now."

No one beat Connors in the first round and no one beat him in the fourth round either. Connors, strong and aggressive, overpowered 12th-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis Monday night 6-4, 6-3, 6-1 to move into the quarterfinals.

The straight-set loss capped a bad day for the Gerulaitis family. Sister Ruta was beaten in the afternoon in singles and the two of them were eliminated from the mixed doubles competition.

Connors' opponent in the quarters will be Czechoslovakian strongman Jan Kodes, who outlasted South African veteran Frew McMillan 6-4, 7-6, 2-6, 7-6 in an afternoon match.

Third-seeded Guillermo Vilas and ninth-seeded Eddie Dibbs advanced to a quarter-final showdown with straight-set victories. Vilas dispatched Teimuras Kakulia of the Soviet Union 7-5, 6-4, 6-0 and Dibbs wore out Rhodesia's Colin Dowdeswell 6-2, 6-4, 6-2.

Both Vilas and Dibbs are clay-court specialists who prefer to stay in the backcourt. Their match could last forever.

"We have long matches," said Dibbs. "We both play the same so it will just depend on who's playing better that day. I'm pleased with my game. I just have to crack through in one of these big tournaments."

In women's play Monday, second-seeded Evonne Goolagong had to share the spotlight with 18-year-old Natasha Chmyreva, the budding Soviet star. Miss Chmyreva, seeded 13th, eliminated Kathy Kuykendall 3-6, 6-4, 6-3 to make it into the quarters where she will likely face Chris Evert.

Miss Chmyreva, tall and pretty with long reddish-blonde hair, said she hopes to be the best woman player in the world, or close to it, some day. "Tennis is my own job and you can do your job good or bad. I chose to do it good. I put pressure on myself."

Miss Goolagong is not concerned with pressure. "When I'm playing well I want to win," she said after whipping France's Francoise Durr 6-2, 6-0, "But when I'm not playing I don't think about it."

The only other singles matches were third-round contests with Mima Jausovec, the 20-year-old Yugoslavian who ousted Virginia Wade, beating Miss Gerulaitis 6-4, 6-2, and Zenda Liess downing Mary Hamm 6-4, 6-2.

Mingo visitor center to open

PUXICO, MISSOURI — On October 17, 1976, at 2:00 p.m., Region 6 of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service will officially dedicate and open to the public a spacious, new Visitor Center at Mingo National Wildlife Refuge in Puxico, Missouri.

The dedication ceremony will emphasize two important activities at the refuge: the environmental education and interpretive programs and the work of the Job Corps Civilian Conservation Center.

The 22,000-acre refuge area provides sanctuary for migratory waterfowl and other wildlife. The Job Corps Center teaches vocational trades to disadvantaged youth through natural resource conservation construction and development projects.

Job Corpsmen built Mingo's Visitor Center. It sits on a bluff overlooking famous Mingo Swamp and houses educational exhibits explaining the wildlife, geology, and ecology of Mingo National Wildlife Refuge.

The new Visitor Center will further serve people. The refuge staff has designed the Center's exhibits to reflect the exotic features of Mingo Swamp's interior--plants and animals seldom found in other parts of Missouri. Deaton Museum Studios of Newton, Iowa, a firm which has done extensive work for the Smithsonian and the National Park Service, has prepared many of the displays including a three-dimensional diorama of Mingo Swamp.

Mingo National Wildlire Refuge lies within easy driving distance of both St. Louis, Missouri, and Memphis, Tennessee, from Interstate 55. The airport at Cape Girardeau, Missouri, is a 45-minute drive east of the refuge. The public is cordially invited to the dedication ceremony. More than 500 are expected. Hundreds more will be out on refuge roads and trails sampling autumn amidst the splendor of Mingo's hardwood forests.

JV schedule has 8 games

The Sikeston High School Jr. Varsity, after a very successful year in 1975, will start an eight-game schedule on Monday evening, Sept. 13, when they host the Jackson Indians' jayvee.

The team will again be coached by Tom Horton and Al Holmes.

Sept. 13, Jackson Here 7:00
Sept. 20, Perryville There 7:00
Sept. 27, Charleston There 7:00
Oct. 4, Dexter Here 7:00
Oct. 11, Poplar Bluff Here 7:00
Oct. 18, Caruthersville Here 7:00
Oct. 25, Paducah There 7:00
Nov. 1, Cape There 3:30

The junior varsity team posted a 5-1-2 record in 1975 and provided many of the starting players on Sikeston's varsity team that belted Farmington 23-0 last Friday.

Mom's night this Friday

Sikeston High School's fourth annual Mom's Night will be held at Public Schools Stadium just prior to Friday night's football game with St. Thomas Aquinas.

Mothers of all the players will be introduced in ceremonies starting at 7:30. Kickoff is slated for 8 p.m.

"We've won every Mom's night we've had," noted head coach Terry Smith, adding that his team would need all the help, or luck, it could get against the tough St. Louis area squad.

'Grandpa' Pearson wins Triple Crown

DARLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — David Pearson, a graying 41-year-old grandfather, says he couldn't tell any difference between winning his first Southern 500 stock car race and winning any other race here.

"It seems like one of the Rebels to me," he said, referring to his six victories in the spring event over the 1.366-mile Darlington Raceway.

Asked Monday how it felt to become the second Triple Crown winner in NASCAR history, Pearson said he didn't know such a title existed until a sports writer mentioned it to him last week.

The only other driver to win the Southern, the World 600 and the Daytona 500 in the same year was Lee Roy Yarbrough, now retired, who won the three prestigious races in 1969. In fact, the record book shows that Richard Petty is the only other driver to score victories at those tracks but not in the same year.

Petty, winless here since 1967, finished second 2.85 seconds behind Pearson's Mercury. The Dodge driver passed Darrell Waltrip's Chevrolet on the fourth turn of the last lap.

Waltrip was third, with Dave Marcis' Dodge fourth and Lennie Pond's Chevrolet fifth, two laps down.

Pearson started from the pole but remained in the top 10 cars for most of the race. He led four times for a total of 93 of the 367 laps, including the last 45. It was his ninth victory in 16 starts this season.

Pearson, who qualified for the pole with a record-breaking speed of 154.699 miles an hour, averaged 120.534 m.p.h. during the 4-hour, 9-minute race because of eight caution flags.

The biggest delay came when Joe Frasson's Chevrolet plowed into the side of Skip Manning's car, trapping Manning in his car for about half an hour.

Doctors said Manning suffered an injured ankle and fractured pelvis. He was listed in fair condition in the hospital. Frasson was given first aid at the track hospital.

New Madrid hosts Slo-pitch tourney

A Slo-pitch softball tournament for men's teams and women's teams will be held in New Madrid, starting Monday night, Sept. 13. An entry fee will be charged.

All teams are invited to call William Kosky at 748-5059 after 5 p.m.

Royals blow three-run lead

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Whitey Herzog was searching for a ray of sunshine in a suddenly gray, threatening world. He could not find it.

"We've been playing so poorly lately," sighed the Kansas City manager. "Maybe this will get us going. But we won't know until tomorrow."

What could have been a historic, as well as valuable victory exploded in the Royals' faces Monday night when the Texas Rangers scored four runs in the ninth inning to emerge with a 5-4 triumph.

The Royals were playing before 27,008 fans who had raised the season attendance to 1,401,121, breaking this city's 21-year-old record for major league ball.

Oakland, their closest pursuers in the American League West, had downed California earlier in the day. But the Royals, with Doug Bird pitching a five-hitter, sailed into the ninth with a 4-1 lead.

With two out and Roy Howell on base, Joe Lahoud lofted a single that put runners on the corners.

Reliever Mark Littel came in, issued a walk and gave up the game winning hit to Toby Harrah.

Serious tennis time at Open

"If you're going to beat me it has to be in the first round," said Connors. "That's the way I feel. I think I'm the man to beat now."

No one beat Connors in the first round and no one beat him in the fourth round either. Connors, strong and aggressive, overpowered 12th-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis Monday night 6-4, 6-3, 6-1 to move into the quarterfinals.

The straight-set loss capped a bad day for the Gerulaitis family. Sister Ruta was beaten in the afternoon in singles and the two of them were eliminated from the mixed doubles competition.

Connors' opponent in the quarters will be Czechoslovakian strongman Jan Kodes, who outlasted South African veteran Frew McMillan 6-4, 7-6, 2-6, 7-6 in an afternoon match.

Third-seeded Guillermo Vilas and ninth-seeded Eddie Dibbs advanced to a quarter-final showdown with straight-set victories. Vilas dispatched Teimuras Kakulia of the Soviet Union 7-5, 6-4, 6-0 and Dibbs wore out Rhodesia's Colin Dowdeswell 6-2, 6-4, 6-2.

Both Vilas and Dibbs are clay-court specialists who prefer to stay in the backcourt. Their match could last forever.

"We have long matches," said Dibbs. "We both play the same so it will just depend on who's playing better that day. I'm pleased with my game. I just have to crack through in one of these big tournaments."

In women's play Monday, second-seeded Evonne Goolagong had to share the spotlight with 18-year-old Natasha Chmyreva, the budding Soviet star. Miss Chmyreva, seeded 13th, eliminated Kathy Kuykendall 3-6, 6-4, 6-3 to make it into the quarters where she will likely face Chris Evert.

Miss Chmyreva, tall and pretty with long reddish-blonde hair, said she hopes to be the best woman player in the world, or close to it, some day. "Tennis is my own job and you can do your job good or bad. I chose to do it good. I put pressure on myself."

Miss Goolagong is not concerned with pressure. "When I'm playing well I want to win," she said after whipping France's Francoise Durr 6-2, 6-0, "But when I'm not playing I don't think about it."

The only other singles matches were third-round contests with Mima Jausovec, the 20-year-old Yugoslavian who ousted Virginia Wade, beating Miss Gerulaitis 6-4, 6-2, and Zenda Liess downing Mary Hamm 6-4, 6-2.

Falcone continues fine hurling as Cards split

Several times during the 1976 season, Expos' pitchers have turned in reasonable efforts, only to lose because their teammates failed to provide any semblance of an offensive attack.

Steve Rogers was a victim of a weak offense Monday night as the Expos dropped a 3-1 decision to the St. Louis Cardinals in the first game of a twi-night doubleheader. In the second game, Montreal grabbed a 3-2 victory.

In the first game, Cardinals' left-hander Pete Falcone scattered four hits, struck out eight and walked one as he brought his record to 12-12.

"They were swinging at a lot of pitches that were out of the strike zone," said Falcone, who has six triumphs in his last seven decisions.

"That was good for me because sometimes I am erratic. My control has been better lately and I think that has something to do with confidence. I feel much more confident."

Rogers gave up five singles, three of them in the seventh inning, when the Cards got their three runs. Montreal came back with a run in the eighth but Bombo Rivera, who tripled home the run, was left stranded when pinch-hitter Jose Morales grounded out.

In the nightcap, pinch-hitter Earl Williams hit a two-out, run-scoring single in the bottom of the ninth inning to give the Expos their win.

Williams' game-winning hit came off John Curtis, 5-8, after he had issued a walk to Mike Jorgensen and an intentional base on balls to Jose Morales.

In the sixth inning, Jorgensen's sacrifice fly had given Montreal a 2-1 lead but the Cardinals came back in the top of the ninth with pinch-hitter Vic Harris driving in the Cardinals second run with a double.

The Cardinals, looking for their first doubleheader sweep this season, fell behind 1-0 in the third inning when Warren Cromartie singled, advanced to second on a sacrifice, went to third on Joe Ferguson's passed ball and scored on a single by Tim Foli

Colts are coachless

SKOKIE, Ill. (AP) — Baltimore Colts Owner Robert Irsay said today he and Coach Ted Marchibroda, who resigned, have patched up their differences in a six-hour meeting and the coach has returned to the National Football League team.

"It was a mutual agreement and it wasn't easy," said Irsay. "I gave my word there would be no interference from management and Ted can hire and fire players and coaches. He is back with the team today and everything is ironed out."

Irsay accepted Marchibroda's resignation Sunday in Milwaukee in a dispute over how to run the club. Marchibroda had been named the NFL's Coach of the Year in 1975 after the Colts won their last nine games.

"Based on his request for a change of the entire Baltimore Colts system, I accepted his resignation," Irsay said after a meeting with Marchibroda Sunday.

The Colts won their first two exhibitions this season but lost the last four.

Irsay, who operates a heating and air conditioning company in the Chicago suburb of Skokie, regularly watches the games from the Colts' bench and gives vent to his anger when displeased with the team's performance. He stormed into the locker room when the Colts lost their fourth straight Thursday to Atlanta and in a tirade lasting 40 minutes said some changes were in order.

"I told the team we weren't hitting, we weren't blocking and we weren't running. I said we'd make some changes," Irsay said at the time.

Baltimore writers reported that Irsay told the players: "If any of you don't want to play on this team, just call me tomorrow and I'll put you on waivers for $1."

At the time Marchibroda said: "I can't continue under these circumstances. I can't have locker room scenes like this every week."

Irsay said today that "the locker room incident had no bearing on our discussions and mutual agreement."

Irsay indicated he would not enter the locker room under such circumstances again, saying, "I gave my word of no interference from management."

It's Oakland once again in AFC West

OAKLAND (AP) — The schedule could be the great equalizer — or at least prevent another runaway by the Oakland Raiders — in the American Football Conference West.

Several preseason injuries, along with personnel changes which included the forced retirement of 48-year-old kicker George Blanda two weeks ago, don't figure to slow the Raiders down that much as they go for their ninth division title in 10 years. They've always had good depth.

"But this year, we're getting to the depth sooner than I like," said Coach John Madden, who sends the Raiders against the Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh Steelers in the most attractive matchup of the National Football League's opening weekend of games.

Fullback Marv Hubbard, defensive end Horace Jones and offensive lineman Henry Lawrence all have suffered injuries which will keep them out of games at least through October. They'll miss a lot of travel.

After facing the Steelers Sept. 12 in the Oakland Coliseum, the Raiders play five straight road games including three against their AFC West rivals, the Kansas City Chiefs, San Diego Chargers and Denver Broncos.

John Ralston's Broncos play their fourth home game of the year Oct. 17 against Oakland, which finished 11-3 last year to runnerup Denver's 6-8. Another scheduling factor is that when expansion caused changes, the Broncos lost the strong Los Angeles Rams as 1976 opponents while the Raiders lost the weaker New Orleans Saints.

One of the NFL's newest teams, the Tampa Bay Buccaneers coached by John McKay, will be listed in the AFC West standings but they won't be playing the usual home-and-home series.

McKay traded with the San Francisco 49ers for Steve Spurrier, the former Heisman Trophy winner from Florida who has thrown more NFL passes than the quarterbacks running the Denver, San Diego and Kansas City offenses.

Steve Ramsey takes over for the retired Charley Johnson as Denver's No. 1 quarterback, hoping running back Otis Armstrong can return to his 1,407-yard form of 1974, after sitting out last season, and that the offensive line stays healthy.

Len Dawson, 41, is an NFL television sportcaster now and Mike Livingston and Tony Adams are battling for the Chiefs' quarterback job. Dan Fouts, starting his fourth pro season, is No. 1 at San Diego backed up by newcomer Neal Jeffrey who has had some sensational summer performances.

Oakland's Ken Stabler has been one of the NFL's top passers the past three years and has two of the most dangerous receivers in the game, Fred Biletnikoff and Cliff Branch. Stabler also has had knee problems, such as on the day in Kansas City last season when the Raiders fell 42-10 to the Chiefs.

Bob Moore, starting Oakland tight end for three years, was left unprotected in the expansion draft and is now one of Spurrier's recievers. But former San Francisco 49er Ted Kwalick, third-year player Dave Casper and versatile veteran Warren Bankston are still available.

'We have three good tight ends and we'll use all three,' says Madden, adding that all three will be on the field at the same time in some situations.

The Raider's top college draft choice in the off season was Charles Philyaw, a 270-pound defensive lineman who may see more action than expected because of injuries to Jones, Kelvin Korver and Tony Cline. But fifth-round pick Fred Steinfort from Boston College is getting more attention, since he's in the placekicking job which Blanda handled, often spectacularly, for nine years.

Oklahoma's Leroy Selmon, the top college lineman of 1975, and his brother Dewey figure in Tampa Bay's defensive plans. Their Sooner teammate Jimbo Elrod is being groomed at Kansas City to take over for middle linebacker Willie Lanier.

But one of college football's flashiest runners, Joe Washington from Oklahoma, may miss his rookie season with San Diego because of knee surgery. Until he was hurt last month, Washington was playing tailback alongside Charger's Don Woods.

SEMO All-Stars named

League champion Vanduser Comets were nearly shut out when it came time to pick the SEMO Fastpitch Softball League All-Stars, as only outfielder Charlie Dye received any mention. Dye was named to the second team unit of the All-Stars released by the league recently.

Oran had the most players recognized, with three first-team and two second-team selections. Righter Trucking of New Hamburg had four players named to the elite.

Falcone continues fine hurling as Cards split

Several times during the 1976 season, Expos' pitchers have turned in reasonable efforts, only to lose because their teammates failed to provide any semblance of an offensive attack.

Steve Rogers was a victim of a weak offense Monday night as the Expos dropped a 3-1 decision to the St. Louis Cardinals in the first game of a twi-night doubleheader. In the second game, Montreal grabbed a 3-2 victory.

In the first game, Cardinals' left-hander Pete Falcone scattered four hits, struck out eight and walked one as he brought his record to 12-12.

"They were swinging at a lot of pitches that were out of the strike zone," said Falcone, who has six triumphs in his last seven decisions.

"That was good for me because sometimes I am erratic. My control has been better lately and I think that has something to do with confidence. I feel much more confident."

Rogers gave up five singles, three of them in the seventh inning, when the Cards got their three runs. Montreal came back with a run in the eighth but Bombo Rivera, who tripled home the run, was left stranded when pinch-hitter Jose Morales grounded out.

In the nightcap, pinch-hitter Earl Williams hit a two-out, run-scoring single in the bottom of the ninth inning to give the Expos their win.

Williams' game-winning hit came off John Curtis, 5-8, after he had issued a walk to Mike Jorgensen and an intentional base on balls to Jose Morales.

In the sixth inning, Jorgensen's sacrifice fly had given Montreal a 2-1 lead but the Cardinals came back in the top of the ninth with pinch-hitter Vic Harris driving in the Cardinals second run with a double.

The Cardinals, looking for their first doubleheader sweep this season, fell behind 1-0 in the third inning when Warren Cromartie singled, advanced to second on a sacrifice, went to third on Joe Ferguson's passed ball and scored on a single by Tim Foli

SKOKIE, Ill. (AP) — Baltimore Colts Owner Robert Irsay said today he and Coach Ted Marchibroda, who resigned, have patched up their differences in a six-hour meeting and the coach has returned to the National Football League team.

"It was a mutual agreement and it wasn't easy," said Irsay. "I gave my word there would be no interference from management and Ted can hire and fire players and coaches. He is back with the team today and everything is ironed out."

Irsay accepted Marchibroda's resignation Sunday in Milwaukee in a dispute over how to run the club. Marchibroda had been named the NFL's Coach of the Year in 1975 after the Colts won their last nine games.

"Based on his request for a change of the entire Baltimore Colts system, I accepted his resignation," Irsay said after a meeting with Marchibroda Sunday.

The Colts won their first two exhibitions this season but lost the last four.

Irsay, who operates a heating and air conditioning company in the Chicago suburb of Skokie, regularly watches the games from the Colts' bench and gives vent to his anger when displeased with the team's performance. He stormed into the locker room when the Colts lost their fourth straight Thursday to Atlanta and in a tirade lasting 40 minutes said some changes were in order.

"I told the team we weren't hitting, we weren't blocking and we weren't running. I said we'd make some changes," Irsay said at the time.

Baltimore writers reported that Irsay told the players: "If any of you don't want to play on this team, just call me tomorrow and I'll put you on waivers for $1."

At the time Marchibroda said: "I can't continue under these circumstances. I can't have locker room scenes like this every week."

Irsay said today that "the locker room incident had no bearing on our discussions and mutual agreement."

Irsay indicated he would not enter the locker room under such circumstances again, saying, "I gave my word of no interference from management."

It's Oakland once again in AFC West

OAKLAND (AP) — The schedule could be the great equalizer — or at least prevent another runaway by the Oakland Raiders — in the American Football Conference West.

Several preseason injuries, along with personnel changes which included the forced retirement of 48-year-old kicker George Blanda two weeks ago, don't figure to slow the Raiders down that much as they go for their ninth division title in 10 years. They've always had good depth.

"But this year, we're getting to the depth sooner than I like," said Coach John Madden, who sends the Raiders against the Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh Steelers in the most attractive matchup of the National Football League's opening weekend of games.

Fullback Marv Hubbard, defensive end Horace Jones and offensive lineman Henry Lawrence all have suffered injuries which will keep them out of games at least through October. They'll miss a lot of travel.

After facing the Steelers Sept. 12 in the Oakland Coliseum, the Raiders play five straight road games including three against their AFC West rivals, the Kansas City Chiefs, San Diego Chargers and Denver Broncos.

John Ralston's Broncos play their fourth home game of the year Oct. 17 against Oakland, which finished 11-3 last year to runnerup Denver's 6-8. Another scheduling factor is that when expansion caused changes, the Broncos lost the strong Los Angeles Rams as 1976 opponents while the Raiders lost the weaker New Orleans Saints.

One of the NFL's newest teams, the Tampa Bay Buccaneers coached by John McKay, will be listed in the AFC West standings but they won't be playing the usual home-and-home series.

McKay traded with the San Francisco 49ers for Steve Spurrier, the former Heisman Trophy winner from Florida who has thrown more NFL passes than the quarterbacks running the Denver, San Diego and Kansas City offenses.

Steve Ramsey takes over for the retired Charley Johnson as Denver's No. 1 quarterback, hoping running back Otis Armstrong can return to his 1,407-yard form of 1974, after sitting out last season, and that the offensive line stays healthy.

Len Dawson, 41, is an NFL television sportscaster now and Mike Livingston and Tony Adams are battling for the Chiefs' quarterback job. Dan Fouts, starting his fourth pro season, is No. 1 at San Diego backed up by newcomer Neal Jeffrey who has had some sensational summer performances.

Oakland's Ken Stabler has been one of the NFL's top passers the past three years and has two of the most dangerous receivers in the game, Fred Biletnikoff and Cliff Branch. Stabler also has had knee problems, such as on the day in Kansas City last season when the Raiders fell 42-10 to the Chiefs.

Bob Moore, starting Oakland tight end for three years, was left unprotected in the expansion draft and is now one of Spurrier's recievers. But former San Francisco 49er Ted Kwalick, third-year player Dave Casper and versatile veteran Warren Bankston are still available.

'We have three good tight ends and we'll use all three,' says Madden, adding that all three will be on the field at the same time in some situations.

The Raider's top college draft choice in the off season was Charles Philyaw, a 270-pound defensive lineman who may see more action than expected because of injuries to Jones, Kelvin Korver and Tony Cline. But fifth-round pick Fred Steinfort from Boston College is getting more attention, since he's in the placekicking job which Blanda handled, often spectacularly, for nine years.

Oklahoma's Leroy Selmon, the top college lineman of 1975, and his brother Dewey figure in Tampa Bay's defensive plans. Their Sooner teammate Jimbo Elrod is being groomed at Kansas City to take over for middle linebacker Willie Lanier.

But one of college football's flashiest runners, Joe Washington from Oklahoma, may miss his rookie season with San Diego because of knee surgery. Until he was hurt last month, Washington was playing tailback alongside Charger's Don Woods.

SEMO All-Stars named

League champion Vanduser Comets were nearly shut out when it came time to pick the SEMO Fastpitch Softball League All-Stars, as only outfielder Charlie Dye received any mention. Dye was named to the second team unit of the All-Stars released by the league recently.

Oran had the most players recognized, with three first-team and two second-team selections. Righter Trucking of New Hamburg had four players named to the elite.

Remains of giant mastadon unearthed

By TERRY WEIDE
Mitchell Daily Republic

HIDDEN TIMBER, S.D. (AP) — A team of four Rapid City men has unearthed the remains of a giant mastodon that probably roamed the earth 70 million years ago.

"What's so exciting about this find is the condition of the skull, and the tusks, too," said Pete Larson, 24, a leader of the excavation team.

"I don't think we will have to replace more than 1 or 2 per cent of the bone in the skull."

Remains of the mastodon were dug out of a hill near Hidden Timber on the Rosebud Indian Reservation in south-central South Dakota early this summer.

The team found most of the skeleton intact and well preserved. One rear leg, the tail, some foot bones and an upper leg were the only bones missing.

Also digging were Larson's younger brother, Neal Larson, Jr., who is a senior geology student, and Robert Tate, 13, son of a local rancher.

"We went out there, not really expecting anything, and started digging. But then we found vertebrae, then a femur, then some ribs. By now the dirt was really flying," said Pete Larson.

The skull measured seven feet one inch, from the tip of the tusks to the back of the skull. The tusks had been worn down during the mammal's lifetime, but were intact and measured 47 inches. The skull was estimated to weigh a ton.

"I don't know how many complete skulls have been found, but there are not very many," Larson said.

Examination of the molars indicated the beast was at least 60 years old when it died, he said. It probably stood 10 feet tall at the shoulder.

The skull and other remains were dabbed with a preservative mixture of water and glue to guard against the deteriorating effects of sunlight and oxygen. The skull was also cast in plaster of paris.

Although fossil fragments of a saber-toothed tiger and a rhinoceros were found by the diggers, Larson said he does not believe the elephant died of violence.

He theorizes that the mastodon died of old age in a quicksand pit or a stream bed at the discovery site.

Commercial collectors have been known to pay thousands of dollars for assembled mastodons, but Larson declined to set any value on the specimen he helped find.

"It's just impossible to place a value on it as far as human enjoyment goes," said Larson, a graduate student at South Dakota School of Mines and Technology. Larson said he would like to see it given to the school museum.

The skeleton belongs to the Tribal Council of the federal government, though the council voted to allow the excavators to crate the bones to send to Rapid City, he said.

Dr. Lamb

Blood sugar questions asked

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have high blood sugar, but I'm not diabetic, maybe borderline. I have quit eating sweets, also potatoes. Should I also quit eating bread?

DEAR READER — One high sugar (glucose) level does not make a diagnosis. If you are overweight you should concentrate on losing fat as your main goal. To that end elliminating high calorie sweets is a good idea.

Bread is an important part of most diets. The usual diabetic can eat bread. Even the diabetic, which you say you are not, has a diet plan that fits with his treatment Should he require insulin, the amount is geared to his diet, whatever that may be, and his daily physical activity or life style. Changing any of these can upset the treatment program. This means that most diabetics can and do eat bread. You need some whole wheat bread or cereal to provide cereal fiber in your diet.

You should also consider eliminating all the excess fat in your diet, particularly if you have a weight problem. In recent years diabetic specialists have emphasized that the type of diet needed for diabetics is low in fat and cholesterol to help avoid the high incidence of heart attacks and vascular disease in diabetics.

To give you a better idea of the thinking about treating diabetes I am sending you The Health Letter number 3-11, Diabetes: Diagnosis, Prevention, and Management. Others who want this information can send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with 50 cents for it. Just address your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My daughter who is 14 has not started her monthly period. She is very concerned because all her girlfriends have. She is small for her age, 4 feet 10 and weighs 80 pounds.

She doesn't want to go to the doctor. Please tell us about menstruation.

DEAR READER — The first thing to do is relax. The onset of menstruation varies from ages 10 to 16 for most girls. Five per cent do not have their first period until between the ages of 16 and 18 and one per cent between ages 18 and 20.

Climate, habits and hereditary factors are all important in determining the onset. Unless your daughter has some definite signs of an endocrine deficiency or is not otherwise in good health I would recommend ignoring the situation until she is at least 16.

Sometimes menstruation is delayed because of obesity or more often these days from excessive preoccupation about weight, associated with ill-advised crash and fad diets.

Just be sure she has a good healthy diet, avoids obesity and remains normally active. Nature usually does the rest. So don't get upset about it and give nature a chance.

You may be interested to know that menstruation between the ages of 2 and 8, with pregnancy, has been reported occasionally in some apparently healthy young girls. In other instances of such early menstruation underlying medical problems caused the early menstruation.

From Gunsmoke to 'Cattle Sally'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It was high noon. Amanda Blake, who ran the Long Branch saloon on "Gunsmoke" for 19 years, leaned on the bar at the Old West parlor in Stage 29 and watched the cowboys and ladies chat.

The ladies wore only knickers. Apparently the laundry was late. A brief fight broke out. Then a cowboy and a lady went upstairs to play whist or something. Then the director said rehearsal was over.

And the blonde actress millions know as warm-hearted, straight-talking "Miss Kitty" repaired to her dressing room to explain how it comes to pass she is playing "Cattle Sally," a bawdyhouse operator.

"It just happened," grinned Miss Blake, whose work will be seen this season in one episode of "The Quest," NBC's new Western series.

"When they called about the part, I about had a fit. They said she's a madam and I said" — her voice rose half an octave for emphasis — "'No! I've done that number.' They said, 'Cool it, wait a minute, it's not really that kind of thing at all.'

"They sent the script over and I read it and really liked it," said Miss Blake, who isn't playing an ordinary madam. Her madam is battling on the side of frontier sodbusters against wicked cattle barons.

The madam has a cause, whereas Miss Kitty "didn't really have a cause per se," said the actress who left the Long Branch a year before CBS blew "Gunsmoke" away. "She was just part of the family.

"But this lady is a crusader and I suspect the ERA (Equal Rights Amendment) people will just love her to death."

Case of the big fizzle

BY JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Howard figured he had hit the jackpot when he signed a "3-B" employment contract. He was to be a Big executive, with a Big company and at a Big salary. What's more, his Big contract was to run for a Big five years.

Reporting for work, Howard rolled up his sleeves with great enthusiasm. After only a few months, however, he was told to roll them down again.

It seemed that, for no particular reason, he and his boss didn't hit it off, and his boss told him to go home and stay there. At the same time, his boss placed him on indefinite leave with full pay. And while there's no place like home, Howard quickly became bored and sued his employer for breach of his employment contract.

"My big job just fizzled away," complained Howard in court.

"I was hired to be a top-drawer executive and I was just put away in a top drawer. For the past three months, all I've been doing is twiddling my unemployed thumbs."

"What's so tough to take about that? asked Howard's employer. "I've been paying him his full salary for doing nothing. If he thinks that's such a bad deal, he should be complaining to a psychiatrist and not to a judge."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit bored Howard to collect for breach of his employment contract?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that when a person is hired as an executive, it's a breach of contract if, without reason, he is not allowed to perform his work. Because he is paid his salary does not cure the breach.

Reagan to air new radio show

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ronald Reagan, who now backs President Ford after narrowly losing the GOP nomination to him, won't have "equal time" or "fairness doctrine" woes when his new radio commentaries start airing.

At least that's the opinion of Harry O'Connor, whose North Hollywood company is syndicating Reagan's daily series of conservative comment. The first show is to air Sept. 20.

O'Connor said he's checked with the Federal Communications Commission on the matter of "equal time" demands, affecting political candidates or their spokesmen, and the "fairness doctrine," which concerns broadcasts on controversial issues of major public importance.

He says he anticipates no problem on ether count with the material Reagan will use in the new series the former California governor began taping in a Hollywood studio on Wednesday.

"He'll discuss philosophy, but he won't take a position directly in support of Ford or directly opposed to Carter," he said, referring to the Democratic standard-bearer, former Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia.

O'Connor, who says 101 stations already have signed up for the Reagan series and expects between 220 and 230 to be airing it when it starts, says Reagan's initial shows will be "reflective" in nature.

"He'll look back on the campaign, the primaries, the convention," he said. "He's also going to do shows covering the platforms announced by the two parties, but he'll just be making philosophical observations."

For O'Connor, the new five-minute series is the second he's syndicated for Reagan. The first was "Viewpoint," which Reagan began in mid-January last year after his term as California's governor expired.

Reagan left that show in mid-November, when he declared for the GOP nomination. The commentary was taken over by Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., who still does the show, aired by about 100 stations.

O'Connor, who declined to say how Reagan was paid for "Viewpoint" or how much he's getting for his new series, predicts as many as 500 stations will be airing the new show by Jan. 1.

It's not the only big-name radio series O'Connor is trying to sell stations now. He has Jack "Dragnet" Webb discusuing consumer fraud, criminal con games in a new series called "The Rip-Off."

Efrem Zimbalist Jr. also is doing a series, in its third season, for O'Connor this fall, and Art Linkletter is doing two. O'Connor said he also is syndicating six other short daily series to stations.

But none involve the sort of commentary that Reagan and Goldwater, America's two most famous conservatives, are doing in their shows.

Best seller deals with crisis

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A young Ivy League graduate charges off to law school, his imagination naively flushed with fantasies of invincibility. It's his time for the Trying Twenties.

Like the song, the 30-year-old junior executive wonders, "Is that all there is?" He doesn't know what is missing, but he itches to expand his boundaries. He's caught in the clutches of the Catch 30s.

"I can't blame those wrinkles on my smiling eyes any longer," muses the housewife, 35. It's half-time in her life, and she feels the pressure to form a game plan for the second half. It's the dawn of her Deadline Decade.

Trying Twenties, Catch-30s and Deadline Decade are some of life's landmarks as plotted in "Passages: Predictable Crises of Adult Life," a new book by journalist Gail Sheehy.

Miss Sheehy, 39, contends that almost all adults face crises, or passages, in their lives which can be predicted and perhaps coped with. Her best-selling book, she says, attempts to serve as a sort of map, charting the personality changes common to each stage of life.

The original idea, Miss Sheehy said, was to research the notion that adults go through stages similar to the "Terrible Twos" and "Noisy Nines" of childhood.

"We've not been very good to ourselves as adults," she said. "I mean, here we are, out there trying to make sense of the world as its most active members, and so much time is spent studying children and adolescents that we almost totally ignore ourselves."

In the course of her three years of research, Miss Sheehy interviewed hundreds of adults, compiled 115 case studies and consulted more than 30 psychologists and analysts. But after wading through all that material, she said, she had to make a "passage" of her own before beginning to write.

"It was a big step when I decided I had the right to do that sort of book," said Miss Sheehy, who previously had written about such nonscientific subjects as the Black Panthers and New York prostitutes.

"For me, it was a breaking out of a pigeon-holing role where people would say: 'Look, you're a journalist, you can't write a scientific book.' I was totally determined not to use the jargon the professionals use to set themselves apart from the public.

"I don't think it's necessary to put psychology into abstract prose no one but psychologists understand. I decided that if I couldn't figure a way to say it in a way I could understand, then I had failed as a writer, which is supposed to be my area of expertise."

Within a few weeks of publication, the book had penetrated best-seller lists. But Miss Sheehy says a perhaps better measure of response is the letters she receives from its readers.

"I have a file of letters this thick," she said. "A good portion are gee-whiz letters: 'Gee, you're writing about me. How did you know?'"

Reno?

Though Tony Bennett's trademark song is " I Left My Heart In San Francisco," he says his favorite city is actually Reno.

The erstwhile New Yorker, one of the most popular male vocalists around these days, says he'd rather play Harrah's in Reno than any other club.

It's not Carnegie Hall, nor the London Palladium — and he has played both — but Reno's people make it the best for him.

"Reno attracts the biggest stars, even though it's small, because of the way they are treated here," said the singer.

He was 50 on Aug. 3. A lot of other singers don't make that age with all their hair and the same strong voice, but a lot of other singers aren't Tony Bennett.

He makes plenty of money, and isn't a bad-boy of entertainment — just a down-to-earth guy who likes to sing his kind of music and make people dream.

The style which was heard in 580 songs on 78 Columbia albums still comes through as mellow as ever.

He didn't walk back to the piano to pick up his microphone, he just stayed in front and sang an unassisted version of "On The Sunny Side Of The Street."

His voice carried easily and clearly to the rear. The only sound was Tony Bennett and the sighs from approving fans.

Why didn't he use a mike?

"At a small club with good acoustics, you can sing a few without a mike, and it's fun once in a while. I have a lot of respect for the old timers who did everything without the mikes and good sound gear," he said. "Besides that, I like to make sure I'm not losing my touch."

Bennett said he plans to continue to sing and continue testing himself — "You've got to keep stretching all the time."

He doesn't sing under the Columbia label anymore, he broke off and formed his own record company.

"Now I can sing what I want to sing, not what someone tells me to sing," he said. "My idea is to give the public what they want.

"I try to sing for everyone, for a general audience, and I try to do that by singing by instinct and singing good music — good music lasts forever."

Bennett has a house in Beverly Hills, Calif. and maintains an apartment in New York City.

During World War II he fought with the infantry in France. He married, became the father of four children and developed his style by watching some of the jazz greats on 52nd street in New York. He hit it big in 1951 with "Because Of You."

Remains of giant mastadon unearthed

By TERRY WEIDE
Mitchell Daily Republic

HIDDEN TIMBER, S.D. (AP) — A team of four Rapid City men has unearthed the remains of a giant mastodon that probably roamed the earth 70 million years ago.

"What's so exciting about this find is the condition of the skull, and the tusks, too," said Pete Larson, 24, a leader of the excavation team.

"I don't think we will have to replace more than 1 or 2 per cent of the bone in the skull."

Remains of the mastodon were dug out of a hill near Hidden Timber on the Rosebud Indian Reservation in south-central South Dakota early this summer.

The team found most of the skeleton intact and well preserved. One rear leg, the tail, some foot bones and an upper leg were the only bones missing.

Also digging were Larson's younger brother, Neal Larson, Jr., who is a senior geology student, and Robert Tate, 13, son of a local rancher.

"We went out there, not really expecting anything, and started digging. But then we found vertebrae, then a femur, then some ribs. By now the dirt was really flying," said Pete Larson.

The skull measured seven feet one inch, from the tip of the tusks to the back of the skull. The tusks had been worn down during the mammal's lifetime, but were intact and measured 47 inches. The skull was estimated to weigh a ton.

"I don't know how many complete skulls have been found, but there are not very many," Larson said.

Examination of the molars indicated the beast was at least 60 years old when it died, he said. It probably stood 10 feet tall at the shoulder.

The skull and other remains were dabbed with a preservative mixture of water and glue to guard against the deteriorating effects of sunlight and oxygen. The skull was also cast in plaster of paris.

Although fossil fragments of a saber-toothed tiger and a rhinoceros were found by the diggers, Larson said he does not believe the elephant died of violence.

He theorizes that the mastodon died of old age in a quicksand pit or a stream bed at the discovery site.

Commercial collectors have been known to pay thousands of dollars for assembled mastodons, but Larson declined to set any value on the specimen he helped find.

"It's just impossible to place a value on it as far as human enjoyment goes," said Larson, a graduate student at South Dakota School of Mines and Technology. Larson said he would like to see it given to the school museum.

The skeleton belongs to the Tribal Council of the federal government, though the council voted to allow the excavators to crate the bones to send to Rapid City, he said.

Dr. Lamb

Blood sugar questions asked

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have high blood sugar, but I'm not diabetic, maybe borderline. I have quit eating sweets, also potatoes. Should I also quit eating bread?

DEAR READER — One high sugar (glucose) level does not make a diagnosis. If you are overweight you should concentrate on losing fat as your main goal. To that end eliminating high calorie sweets is a good idea.

Bread is an important part of most diets. The usual diabetic can eat bread. Even the diabetic, which you say you are not, has a diet plan that fits with his treatment Should he require insulin, the amount is geared to his diet, whatever that may be, and his daily physical activity or life style. Changing any of these can upset the treatment program. This means that most diabetics can and do eat bread. You need some whole wheat bread or cereal to provide cereal fiber in your diet.

You should also consider eliminating all the excess fat in your diet, particularly if you have a weight problem. In recent years diabetic specialists have emphasized that the type of diet needed for diabetics is low in fat and cholesterol to help avoid the high incidence of heart attacks and vascular disease in diabetics.

To give you a better idea of the thinking about treating diabetes I am sending you The Health Letter number 3-11, Diabetes: Diagnosis, Prevention, and Management. Others who want this information can send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with 50 cents for it. Just address your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My daughter who is 14 has not started her monthly period. She is very concerned because all her girlfriends have. She is small for her age, 4 feet 10 and weighs 80 pounds.

She doesn't want to go to the doctor. Please tell us about menstruation.

DEAR READER — The first thing to do is relax. The onset of menstruation varies from ages 10 to 16 for most girls. Five per cent do not have their first period until between the ages of 16 and 18 and one per cent between ages 18 and 20.

Climate, habits and hereditary factors are all important in determining the onset. Unless your daughter has some definite signs of an endocrine deficiency or is not otherwise in good health I would recommend ignoring the situation until she is at least 16.

Sometimes menstruation is delayed because of obesity or more often these days from excessive preoccupation about weight, associated with ill-advised crash and fad diets.

"Reno attracts the biggest stars, even though it's small, because of the way they are treated here," said the singer.

He was 50 on Aug. 3. A lot of other singers don't make that age with all their hair and the same strong voice, but a lot of other singers aren't Tony Bennett.

He makes plenty of money, and isn't a bad-boy of entertainment — just a down-to-earth guy who likes to sing his kind of music and make people dream.

The style which was heard in 580 songs on 78 Columbia albums still comes through as mellow as ever.

He didn't walk back to the piano to pick up his microphone, he just stayed in front and sang an unassisted version of "On The Sunny Side Of The Street."

His voice carried easily and clearly to the rear. The only sound was Tony Bennett and the sighs from approving fans.

Why didn't he use a mike?

"At a small club with good acoustics, you can sing a few without a mike, and it's fun once in a while. I have a lot of respect for the old timers who did everything without the mikes and good sound gear," he said. "Besides that, I like to make sure I'm not losing my touch."

Bennett said he plans to continue to sing and continue testing himself — "You've got to keep stretching all the time."

He doesn't sing under the Columbia label anymore, he broke off and formed his own record company.

"Now I can sing what I want to sing, not what someone tells me to sing," he said. "My idea is to give the public what they want.

"I try to sing for everyone, for a general audience, and I try to do that by singing by instinct and singing good music — good music lasts forever."

Bennett has a house in Beverly Hills, Calif. and maintains an apartment in New York City.

During World War II he fought with the infantry in France. He married, became the father of four children and developed his style by watching some of the jazz greats on 52nd street in New York. He hit it big in 1951 with "Because Of You."

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1940, German bombers began the World War II raids against London which were to become known as the "London blitz."

On this date:

In 1533, England's Queen Elizabeth I was born

In 1825, the French hero of the American Revolution, the Marquis de Lafayette, said his last farewells to President John Adams at the White House.

In 1930, work began on Boulder Dam, now known as Hoover Dam, on the Colorado River.

Five years ago: An attempt was made to assassinate the U.S. Ambassador in Cambodia. A bomb planted on a bicycle rolled at his car but failed to explode.

Thought for today: Chance is the fool's name for fate. — Fred Astaire, in the movie "The Gay Divorcee."

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago, a Council of War recommended to General Washington that the American army remain in New York and fight to try to hold the city.

Tenniswear Colorful, Adaptable

TENNISWEAR has turned colorful and this year it's also meant to be styled so as to be "readily adaptable to any sports arena." At left, is coatdress styling, a carefully rounded collar, bright buttons and front panels of red and navy. At right, it's a brown top with slightly flared white skirt, the stripe on the skirt and piping on the bodice providing a touch of super graphics and everything tied together with a bow at the back. (Coat dress by Keddie Kreations, brown and white by Simonetta, both of Milliken Visa doubleknit of 100 per cent Kodel polyester)

SEEING EYE TO EYE should be no problem when you're already nose to nose, unless one of you also happens to be upside down. Susan Ford and Liberty, the First Family's Golden Retriever, are caught in a nuzzling session by White House photographer David Kennerly.

Tenniswear Colorful, Adaptable

TENNISWEAR has turned colorful and this year it's also meant to be styled so as to be "readily adaptable to any sports arena." At left, is coatdress styling, a carefully rounded collar, bright buttons and front panels of red and navy. At right, it's a brown top with slightly flared white skirt, the stripe on the skirt and piping on the bodice providing a touch of super graphics and everything tied together with a bow at the back. (Coat dress by Keddie Kreations, brown and white by Simonetta, both of Milliken Visa doubleknit of 100 per cent Kodel polyester)

SEEING EYE TO EYE should be no problem when you're already nose to nose, unless one of you also happens to be upside down. Susan Ford and Liberty, the First Family's Golden Retriever, are caught in a nuzzling session by White House photographer David Kennerly.

LOW PROFILE of this truck is not the result of a logging accident. The huge truck, one of the biggest log-hauling vehicles in the world undergoing tests at Menzies Bay, British Columbia, was designed with a flattened cab to facilitate carrying more than 250 tons of logs in a single trip.

News in brief

By The Associated Press

After a Labor Day weekend marked by a busing protest and a school bombing, students returned to classes today in Louisville, Ky. In three other large cities, schools opened with new moves toward desegregation apparently meeting little opposition. Officials in Milwaukee, St. Louis and Omaha, Neb., predicted a peaceful first day with no demonstrations anticipated as they tried out plans to improve the racial balance of their classrooms. There was some protest around the country among teachers — but over contracts, not racial integration. In Buffalo, N.Y, on Monday night, teachers defying court injunctions voted by a 2-1 margin to strike and said they would picket all schools today. Classes for the city's 54,000 public school pupils were to begin Wednesday.

Civil Defense to limit funds to nuclear attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is requiring states and localities to limit their use of federal civil defense funds to preparations for nuclear attack rather than for natural disasters such as floods, hurricanes and tornadoes.

The new requirement is a change in emphasis from the approach instituted in May 1972 by then-Defense Secretary Melvin Laird, which called for dual civil defense planning covering both natural disasters and nuclear attacks.

Although matching funds to state and local civil defense agencies will be limited beginning Oct. 1 to preparation for enemy nuclear attack, federally supported civil defense equipment and personnel can be used when natural disaster strikes.

The dual approach is being de-emphasized to cut costs, as indicated by the Ford administration's proposal earlier this year for a $71-million civil defense budget, down $21 million from fiscal 1976.

However, the new policy is not expected to bring a significant cut in the amount of federal money going to the states, cities and counties to support civil defense organizations because Congress turned aside the administration request and appropriated $82.5 million in the new year.

Congress also has allocated $29.6 million, the same amount as in fiscal 1976, for 50-50 matching of state and local funds for civil defense programs for the new 1977 fiscal year.

The civil defense program currently concentrates on "crisis relocation planning" for moving people from high-risk areas near military bases and cities that are prime targets for nuclear attack.

Another civil defense objective is to protect those persons who are not evacuated by providing "the best available shelter" where short warning time precludes relocation.

Missouri weather sunny

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Sunny, warm weather was the rule today in Missouri, but the National Weather Service said there was a chance for thundershowers Wednesday and Thursday. The forecast also called for cooler weather later in the week.

The western part of the state received some rain on Labor Day when isolated thunderstorms rumbled through the area in the morning. More than an inch fell at Independence and Raytown, but other parts of the Kansas City metropolitan area received only about a tenth of an inch.

Temperatures early this morning were mostly in the 50s, but the mercury fell to 49 at West Plains during the night. High temperatures today were expected to range from the mid 80s to the low 90s.

The weather service said a cold front extending through the Dakotas was expected to move across Missouri Wednesday and trigger widely scattered thundershowers. Lows tonight were expected to be in the 60s, with highs Wednesday in the 80s.

Cooler weather was expected later in the week. The extended outlook for Thursday through Saturday called for a chance of thundershowers Thursday and high temperatures mainly in the 70s.

Highs in Missouri Monday varied from 90 at Springfield and Kansas City to 83 at Cape Girardeau. Lows ranged from 49 at West Plains to 64 at Kansas City.

Southwestern Bell rate case date has been changed to September 27

JEFFERSON CITY — The date of the general hearing in the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. rate case has been changed to Sept. 27 by the Public Service Commission.

The hearing will begin at 10 a.m. in the commission hearing room on the 10th floor of the Jefferson Building, and is expected to continue for three weeks.

It had earlier been set for Sept. 20, but was rescheduled because the date for filing of evidence was changed.

Intervenors in the case and the State Public Counsel had been granted last week additional time, to Sept. 7, to file their direct testimony and exhibits. The commission changed the date for the filing of its staff's evidence to Sept. 7. All parties earlier had been given a deadline of Aug. 26.

Because of the change in filing dates, it was necessary to set back the dates of the general hearing and the prehearing conference. The prehearing conference, originally set for Sept. 13, will begin Sept. 20.

The commission held local hearings at Caruthersville, Springfield, Cape Girardeau, Kansas City, Clayton and St. Louis to listen to comments from customers about the rate request and the company's service.

Southwestern Bell has requested an increase in gross annual revenues of about $71.7 million. If approved, the increase would raise the monthly rates of the average residential or business customer by about 15 per cent.

The company also proposes a 20-cent charge on directory assistance calls if a customer makes more than three calls per month to directory assistance within his home area code. There would be no charge for directory assistance calls outside a customer's home area code, nor for calls made by handicapped customers or calls from coin phones, hospitals, hotels and motels.

An increase in installation charges has also been requested by Southwestern Bell. The utility wishes to raise the charges for the typical residential installation from $24 to $44, and the charges for the typical business installation from $45 to $66.

U.S. demanding full list of MIAS

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials say they are pleased that the government of Vietnam has identified a dozen U.S. airmen killed in the Vietnam war, but they are demanding a full accounting for the hundreds of other Americans still listed as missing in action.

"We're pleased that they've started to give us some information," said William Hyland, deputy national security affairs director to President Ford, after the Vietnamese government released the fliers' names in Paris on Monday. "What we want is a full accounting and without any further delay."

A State Department official repeated the call for a full accounting, saying, "We cannot believe that the Vietnamese wish to trade on the misery of American families."

The Vietnamese called their move a good will gesture. They said the 12 Americans had been listed as missing in action.

The Pentagon said one had been listed as killed in action, one as a prisoner of war and the others as missing in action.

The Pentagon still lists 795 Americans as missing in action in the war, including 527 in Vietnam itself. It lists 1,710 others as killed in action whose bodies were not recovered, including 1,347 in Vietnam.

Most of the missing are fliers and it is generally presumed they are dead.

Observers viewed the surprise Vietnamese move as an attempt to ease U.S. opposition to Vietnam's application for membership in the United Nations and to encourage the United States to provide war reparations under the 1973 Paris cease-fire accord.

The Pentagon refused to release their home towns until it notified all next of kin.

Rep. G.V. "Sonny" Montgomery, D-Miss., chairman of the House Select Committee on Missing Persons in Southeast Asia, said all were shot down between 1965 and 1968. Most, if not all, were shot down over North Vietnam, he said.

The mother of Air Force Capt. Samuel E. Waters, one of those listed, said she expected the bad news.

"We didn't really expect to hear any good news, but of course you always hope," said Virginia Waters of Mocksville, N.C., whose son had been missing since Dec. 13, 1966.

The Pentagon changed Waters' status from missing to dead two years ago after North Vietnam made a general release of American prisoners of war.

Organics hold the key to life on Mars

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Scientists say that if Viking 2 finds organic molecules when it sifts Martian soil they will be convinced that life exists on the red planet.

The Viking 1 space probe seems to have been telling about the discovery of life for the past few weeks, Dr. Gerald Soffen, Viking's chief scientist, said Monday. But he said its experiments failed to produce any of the carbon-based, or organic, molecules which are found in every living thing on earth.

The lack of organics is "the single argument against biology (life)," Soffen said. "I would have said, 'That is life,' but that organic is holding me back."

If Viking 2 comes up with organic molecules, "that would do it for us," he said.

Scientists at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory here thought they might find organic substances on Mars, but they were unprepared for the discovery of what apparently seems to be life-harboring soil that contains no organics. They have described Viking 1's findings as "tantalizing, but inconclusive" and "bizarre chemistry."

If the smallest of organic compounds can be discovered by Viking 2 in the rocky plains of Utopia, the essentials for life will have been found.

Of course, Soffen said, there is always the possibility that Martian organisms are based on some other compound, and get along quite well without organics.

"We would be fools to say 'it can't be,'" Soffen said, "because we don't know everything. We're scientists stuck in the 20th Century, all we know is what goes on around us."

Viking 2 will be reaching for more soil Saturday. Its scooping arm has been tested and is not expected to experience any of the locking pin problems which twice jammed the arm on Viking 1.

It will begin an organic chemistry probe of the soil sample on Sept. 17, and scientists say that by Sept. 20 they may have an answer to whether or not life exists on Mars.

Beetles take $61 million bite out of Illinois corn

CHICAGO (AP) — An entomologist says beetles have taken a $61 million bite out of Illinois' corn crop.

Early season projections of a record crop have been cut by dry weather. And if that weren't bad enough, the corn rootworm beetle may have knocked 11 million bushels off the state's harvest and cost farmers $61 million, says Dr. Steve Moore of the University of Illinois.

"Early soil treatment helped stave off a catastrophe," he said over the weekend. "This year had the highest infestation since the late 1960s, and right now the outlook is for more of the same next year."

He said the corn rootworm beetle comes in two varieties: The Northern, which has been in the state since the Indians, and the Western, which flew into the state from Iowa and points west about 15 years ago.

The culprits' favorite food is corn silks which, when damaged, can prevent polination, resulting in stunted corn.

Illinois farmers spent an estimated $25 million this spring to fight the beetle larvae that was feeding on the tender roots of newly-planted corn on five million acres in the northern part of the state, Moore said. The infestation has been moving south, but generally is confined to parts of the north, he added.

Moore said farmers spent another $9 million in July and August to combat adult beetles on 1.5 million acres. A survey of 10 fields in each of 36 counties last month found 1.4 beetles per plant and as many as five in some counties, he said.

Scientists figure an 0.8 per cent yield loss per beetle. Moore said a conservative loss estimate on a statewide average is one bushel an acre on 11 million acres.

In addition to insecticides, Moore said, farmers can try to control beetles by rotating crops so the larvae won't have corn roots to feed on in the spring, or by plowing up the fields after harvest this fall, killing the larvae.

"Unfortunately, in some areas, you would have a trade-off in soil erosion by full tillage," he said.

Carlton Hamlin

BLOOMFIELD — Carlton Hamlin, 65, of Route Two died Sunday in Baptist Memorial Hospital at Memphis.

Born Aug. 11, 1911, he was reared by his grandparents, the late Mr. and Mrs. D.S. Buchanon, and had lived in the Zion community all his life.

On Sept. 29, 1935, he married Ruth Clodfelter, who survives.

Also surviving are: one daughter, Betty Anne Meyer of Denver, Colo.; one son, Carlton Hamlin Jr. of Pevely; and three grandchildren.

Services were conducted at 2 p.m. today in Chiles-Cooper Funeral Home by Raymond Duffey, minister of the Bloomfield Church of Christ.

Burial will follow in Dexter Cemetery.

Talmadge Pierce

ST. LOUIS — Talmadge Oliver Pierce, 71, a former Sikeston resident, died Aug. 16 in a St. Louis hospital.

He was born Nov. 5, 1904 in Mayfield, Ky., to the late John and Lydia Pierce. The family moved to the Sikeston area a few years later.

He moved to St. Louis in the early 1930's, where he was employed by the public transit system until he retired in 1966.

Survivors include: one daughter, Mrs. Janet Schnur of St. Louis; one sister, Mrs. Delpha Elderbrood of Sikeston; and three grandchildren.

News in brief

By The Associated Press

After a Labor Day weekend marked by a busing protest and a school bombing, students returned to classes today in Louisville, Ky. In three other large cities, schools opened with new moves toward desegregation apparently meeting little opposition. Officials in Milwaukee, St. Louis and Omaha, Neb., predicted a peaceful first day with no demonstrations anticipated as they tried out plans to improve the racial balance of their classrooms. There was some protest around the country among teachers — but over contracts, not racial integration. In Buffalo, N.Y, on Monday night, teachers defying court injunctions voted by a 2-1 margin to strike and said they would picket all schools today. Classes for the city's 54,000 public school pupils were to begin Wednesday.

Civil Defense to limit funds to nuclear attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is requiring states and localities to limit their use of federal civil defense funds to preparations for nuclear attack rather than for natural disasters such as floods, hurricanes and tornadoes.

The new requirement is a change in emphasis from the approach instituted in May 1972 by then-Defense Secretary Melvin Laird, which called for dual civil defense planning covering both natural disasters and nuclear attacks.

Although matching funds to state and local civil defense agencies will be limited beginning Oct. 1 to preparation for enemy nuclear attack, federally supported civil defense equipment and personnel can be used when natural disaster strikes.

The dual approach is being de-emphasized to cut costs, as indicated by the Ford administration's proposal earlier this year for a $71-million civil defense budget, down $21 million from fiscal 1976.

However, the new policy is not expected to bring a significant cut in the amount of federal money going to the states, cities and counties to support civil defense organizations because Congress turned aside the administration request and appropriated $82.5 million in the new year.

Congress also has allocated $29.6 million, the same amount as in fiscal 1976, for 50-50 matching of state and local funds for civil defense programs for the new 1977 fiscal year.

The civil defense program currently concentrates on "crisis relocation planning" for moving people from high-risk areas near military bases and cities that are prime targets for nuclear attack.

Another civil defense objective is to protect those persons who are not evacuated by providing "the best available shelter" where short warning time precludes relocation.

Missouri weather sunny

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Sunny, warm weather was the rule today in Missouri, but the National Weather Service said there was a chance for thundershowers Wednesday and Thursday. The forecast also called for cooler weather later in the week.

The western part of the state received some rain on Labor Day when isolated thunderstorms rumbled through the area in the morning. More than an inch fell at Independence and Raytown, but other parts of the Kansas City metropolitan area received only about a tenth of an inch.

Temperatures early this morning were mostly in the 50s, but the mercury fell to 49 at West Plains during the night. High temperatures today were expected to range from the mid 80s to the low 90s.

The weather service said a cold front extending through the Dakotas was expected to move across Missouri Wednesday and trigger widely scattered thundershowers. Lows tonight were expected to be in the 60s, with highs Wednesday in the 80s.

Cooler weather was expected later in the week. The extended outlook for Thursday through Saturday called for a chance of thundershowers Thursday and high temperatures mainly in the 70s.

Highs in Missouri Monday varied from 90 at Springfield and Kansas City to 83 at Cape Girardeau. Lows ranged from 49 at West Plains to 64 at Kansas City.

Southwestern Bell rate case date has been changed to September 27

JEFFERSON CITY — The date of the general hearing in the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. rate case has been changed to Sept. 27 by the Public Service Commission.

The hearing will begin at 10 a.m. in the commission hearing room on the 10th floor of the Jefferson Building, and is expected to continue for three weeks.

It had earlier been set for Sept. 20, but was rescheduled because the date for filing of evidence was changed.

Intervenors in the case and the State Public Counsel had been granted last week additional time, to Sept. 7, to file their direct testimony and exhibits. The commission changed the date for the filing of its staff's evidence to Sept. 7. All parties earlier had been given a deadline of Aug. 26.

Because of the change in filing dates, it was necessary to set back the dates of the general hearing and the prehearing conference. The prehearing conference, originally set for Sept. 13, will begin Sept. 20.

The commission held local hearings at Caruthersville, Springfield, Cape Girardeau, Kansas City, Clayton and St. Louis to listen to comments from customers about the rate request and the company's service.

Southwestern Bell has requested an increase in gross annual revenues of about $71.7 million. If approved, the increase would raise the monthly rates of the average residential or business customer by about 15 per cent.

The company also proposes a 20-cent charge on directory assistance calls if a customer makes more than three calls per month to directory assistance within his home area code. There would be no charge for directory assistance calls outside a customer's home area code, nor for calls made by handicapped customers or calls from coin phones, hospitals, hotels and motels.

An increase in installation charges has also been requested by Southwestern Bell. The utility wishes to raise the charges for the typical residential installation from $24 to $44, and the charges for the typical business installation from $45 to $66.

U.S. demanding full list of MIAS

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials say they are pleased that the government of Vietnam has identified a dozen U.S. airmen killed in the Vietnam war, but they are demanding a full accounting for the hundreds of other Americans still listed as missing in action.

"We're pleased that they've started to give us some information," said William Hyland, deputy national security affairs director to President Ford, after the Vietnamese government released the fliers' names in Paris on Monday. "What we want is a full accounting and without any further delay."

A State Department official repeated the call for a full accounting, saying, "We cannot believe that the Vietnamese wish to trade on the misery of American families."

The Vietnamese called their move a good will gesture. They said the 12 Americans had been listed as missing in action.

The Pentagon said one had been listed as killed in action, one as a prisoner of war and the others as missing in action.

The Pentagon still lists 795 Americans as missing in action in the war, including 527 in Vietnam itself. It lists 1,710 others as killed in action whose bodies were not recovered, including 1,347 in Vietnam.

Most of the missing are fliers and it is generally presumed they are dead.

Observers viewed the surprise Vietnamese move as an attempt to ease U.S. opposition to Vietnam's application for membership in the United Nations and to encourage the United States to provide war reparations under the 1973 Paris cease-fire accord.

The Pentagon refused to release their home towns until it notified all next of kin.

Rep. G.V. "Sonny" Montgomery, D-Miss., chairman of the House Select Committee on Missing Persons in Southeast Asia, said all were shot down between 1965 and 1968. Most, if not all, were shot down over North Vietnam, he said.

The mother of Air Force Capt. Samuel E. Waters, one of those listed, said she expected the bad news.

"We didn't really expect to hear any good news, but of course you always hope," said Virginia Waters of Mocksville, N.C., whose son had been missing since Dec. 13, 1966.

The Pentagon changed Waters' status from missing to dead two years ago after North Vietnam made a general release of American prisoners of war.

Organics hold the key to life on Mars

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Scientists say that if Viking 2 finds organic molecules when it sifts Martian soil they will be convinced that life exists on the red planet.

The Viking 1 space probe seems to have been telling about the discovery of life for the past few weeks, Dr. Gerald Soffen, Viking's chief scientist, said Monday. But he said its experiments failed to produce any of the carbon-based, or organic, molecules which are found in every living thing on earth.

The lack of organics is "the single argument against biology (life)," Soffen said. "I would have said, 'That is life,' but that organic is holding me back."

If Viking 2 comes up with organic molecules, "that would do it for us," he said.

Scientists at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory here thought they might find organic substances on Mars, but they were unprepared for the discovery of what apparently seems to be life-harboring soil that contains no organics. They have described Viking 1's findings as "tantalizing, but inconclusive" and "bizarre chemistry."

If the smallest of organic compounds can be discovered by Viking 2 in the rocky plains of Utopia, the essentials for life will have been found.

Of course, Soffen said, there is always the possibility that Martian organisms are based on some other compound, and get along quite well without organics.

"We would be fools to say 'it can't be,'" Soffen said, "because we don't know everything. We're scientists stuck in the 20th Century, all we know is what goes on around us."

Viking 2 will be reaching for more soil Saturday. Its scooping arm has been tested and is not expected to experience any of the locking pin problems which twice jammed the arm on Viking 1.

It will begin an organic chemistry probe of the soil sample on Sept. 17, and scientists say that by Sept. 20 they may have an answer to whether or not life exists on Mars.

Beetles take $61 million bite out of Illinois corn

CHICAGO (AP) — An entomologist says beetles have taken a $61 million bite out of Illinois' corn crop.

Early season projections of a record crop have been cut by dry weather. And if that weren't bad enough, the corn rootworm beetle may have knocked 11 million bushels off the state's harvest and cost farmers $61 million, says Dr. Steve Moore of the University of Illinois.

"Early soil treatment helped stave off a catastrophe," he said over the weekend. "This year had the highest infestation since the late 1960s, and right now the outlook is for more of the same next year."

He said the corn rootworm beetle comes in two varieties: The Northern, which has been in the state since the Indians, and the Western, which flew into the state from Iowa and points west about 15 years ago.

The culprits' favorite food is corn silks which, when damaged, can prevent polination, resulting in stunted corn.

Illinois farmers spent an estimated $25 million this spring to fight the beetle larvae that was feeding on the tender roots of newly-planted corn on five million acres in the northern part of the state, Moore said. The infestation has been moving south, but generally is confined to parts of the north, he added.

Moore said farmers spent another $9 million in July and August to combat adult beetles on 1.5 million acres. A survey of 10 fields in each of 36 counties last month found 1.4 beetles per plant and as many as five in some counties, he said.

Scientists figure an 0.8 per cent yield loss per beetle. Moore said a conservative loss estimate on a statewide average is one bushel an acre on 11 million acres.

In addition to insecticides, Moore said, farmers can try to control beetles by rotating crops so the larvae won't have corn roots to feed on in the spring, or by plowing up the fields after harvest this fall, killing the larvae.

"Unfortunately, in some areas, you would have a trade-off in soil erosion by full tillage," he said.

Community Action Agency depended on in emergencies

PORTAGEVILLE — Thousands of residents in the six-county area served by Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corporation have come to depend upon the Community Action Agency for help in emergencies. Jerome DeLisle, area opportunity center director, was not surprised then when a group of Spanish-speaking people whose bus had broken down reqeusted assistance.

The group of 22 architectural and engineering students and supervisors were from Mexico City, Mexico. They were bound for Chicago and the National Institute of Art where they were to study architectural design. As any group of students, they were short of funds and food and needed a place to spend the night while the bus was was being repaired.

DAEOC arranged for them to stay at the Head Start Center in Portageville and helped them buy groceries while Hays Ford worked on repairing the diesel-engine bus. Ordinarily, the bus would have to be towed to another city such as Sikeston for repair, but Hays Ford picked up the parts and borrowed a diesel mechanic.

The mechanic worked overtime to repair the bus so that the students could get an early start the next morning. However, when it came time to pay the repair costs, all they had was Mexican currency and the bank was closed. DeLisle signed for the repairs in exchange for 2,700 pesos.

Wednesday morning found DeLisle somewhat anxiously waiting at the bank to see how much 2,700 pesos was worth in American money. The pesos were worth the repair bill — and the bank charge for exchanging foreign money.

Stable post 1 rates no service cutbacks with new post bill

By THOMAS EAGLETON
United States Senator

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The postal service bill recently agreed to by a House- Senate conference committee promises stable postal rates and no service cutbacks -- for the time being.

The bill represents a compromise. One faction in Congress wanted to substantially increase congressional control over Postal Service policy. Another wanted to give the Postal Service the additional billion-dollar subsidy it requested while maintaining a hands-off posture.

Under the Compromise, the Postal Service will get up to a billion dollars in tax money for fiscal year 1977 operations. It also will get a Postal Service Commission, an independent panel which will study postal operations and report back to the Congress next March on how postal service should be changed. The compromise bill also requires annual oversight hearings by the House and Senate Post Office Committees and forbids rate increases or service cutbacks until at least next March, when the Postal Service Commission makes its report.

That is good news for many residents of rural Missouri, where the Postal Service had been studying more than 100 rural post offices for possible closing.

Until March 15, the Postal Service will not be allowed to close any of these post offices serving more than 35 families; offices serving less than 35 families can be closed only if 60 per cent of the customers agree.

After March 15, the Postal Service will be required to ascertain community sentiment before closing a rural post office, and procedures for appealing closures to the Postal Rate Commission will be in effect.

A few weeks ago, I reported on a new Social Security Administration regulation which threatened to cause a disastrous cut in supplemental security income payments to patients in Missouri's practical homes met Social Security requirements for provision of medical care, which would qualify the patient for full SSI payments.

I now am pleased to report that Social Security has reviewed and reversed its earlier position. They have determined that our practical nursing homes can in fact qualify as medical facilities, which means that indigent patients in these homes can continue to receive their full SSI benefits.

Havyland named to head SEMO MBA program

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Dr. Jerry Haugland, associate professor of accounting and finance at Southeast Missouri State University, has been named coordinator of the university's master of business administration degree program.

In making the announcement, Dr. Gene Loftis, dean of the College of Business, said Haugland's duties would include coordinating the preparation and grading of the comprehensive examinations administered to MBA degree candidates.

Haughland, a member of the Southeast Missouri State faculty since 1966, will also work with the dean in admitting students to the graduate program in business and assigning them advisors.

The MBA degree program was introduced at Southeast Missouri State several years ago and is the newest of the university's graduate offerings. Like many of the institution's graduate programs, much of the MBA enrollment consists of part-time students attending evening courses.

Haughland, a native of Sutherland, Neb., received both his bachelor's and master's degrees at the University of Nebraska in Lincoln, Neb. He took a leave of absence from Southeast Missouri State from 1970 to 1973 to work on his doctorate at Oklahoma State University. He received his doctor of philosophy degree last year.

A member of several business honoraries, Haugland is on the board of directors of the Missouri Association of Accounting Educators, coordinator of memberships in Missouri for the American Accounting Association and a member of the American Finance Association and the Cape Girardeau Association of Professional Accountants. He is also treasurer of the Optimist Club of Cape Girardeau.

200,000 Missourians in vocational education classes

JEFFERSON CITY — More than 200,000 Missourians will participate in vocational education programs during the coming school year, according to projections made by the State Department of Elementary and Secondary Education.

The projections are part of the State Plan for Vocational Education recently presented to and approved by the State Board of Education.

A total of 140 new or expanded programs will be implemented this year, and the 1976-77 enrollment in vocational education is expected to show an increase of 5,000 students above the 1975-76 total.

Several sources of vocational education are available to interested persons in Missouri. Fifty-four area vocational-technical schools are now in operation throughout the state, offering a range of instruction from appliance repair and auto mechanics to food service and licensed practical nursing. Community colleges, junior colleges and state colleges also offer vocational programs in their curricula.

Comprehensive high schools in local districts are important members of the vocational education system in Missouri. The number of applications for vocational programs by secondary schools for this fall is as strong as in past years, according to Dr. Frank Drake, coordinator of vocational education for the State Department of Education. Over the past five years, the number of participants in vocational programs at the secondary level in Missouri has increased by 42,000.

This figure may continue to climb as local school districts in Missouri offer additional vocational programs in the future. In efforts to raise their state classification and accreditation ratings, many school districts are expanding their course offerings in vocational and other areas.

Building programs are presently under way for several of the state's area vocational-technical schools. The new area school at Clinton will occupy portions of its new facility in September, and the new school at Macon is expected to be operational sometime during the year. Additions to existing area schools at Kirksville and Marshall are near completion, as are new facilities for vocational education at State Fair Community College at Sedalia.

Labor Day across the U.S.

Associated Press Writer

Union leaders marked Labor Day 1976 by recalling the crusaders of the early workers' movement, while politicians campaigned and many Americans celebrated summer's swan song by seeking sun at beaches and bargains at stores.

Warm temperatures and sunny skies that prevailed over most of the nation sent millions to the roads in their cars. The three-day death toll reached 476, 69 more than died during the same period last year.

Last year, 407 persons died in Labor Day weekend traffic accidents. The worst Labor Day death toll was 688 in 1969.

A record $21,723,813 was pledged during the annual Labor Day Jerry Lewis Telethon Against Muscular Dystrophy, $2.9 million more than the total pledged a year ago for the televised marathon of entertainers.

In New Orleans, police officers staged a "blue flu" day protesting the city's refusal to pay double time and a half to officers assigned to work the holiday. Police officials said 135 of the 229 patrolmen assigned to work Labor Day called in sick.

More than 40,000 persons were on hand Monday night as Chicago honored James C. Petrillo, 84, for 40 years president of the Chicago Federation of Musicians and retired president of the American Federation of Musicians. Mayor Richard Daley told the crowd at the dedication of the James C. Petrillo Music Shell in Grant Park that Petrillo played an important role in helping musicians get jobs during the bleak days of the Depression.

Peter J. McGuire, an organizer for the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, was honored in ceremonies at Camden, N.J., as the man who first proposed a holiday to honor working people. McGuire made the first Labor Day speech in 1882. Congress proclaimed it a national holiday in 1894.

On the political scene, Democratic presidential nominee Jimmy Carter formally launched his election campaign by addressing a crowd at the Warm Springs, Ga., "Little White House" frequently used by Franklin D. Roosevelt. Carter said the past eight years of Republican administration have been filled with scandal and mismanagement.

Havyland named to head SEMO MBA program

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Dr. Jerry Haugland, associate professor of accounting and finance at Southeast Missouri State University, has been named coordinator of the university's master of business administration degree program.

In making the announcement, Dr. Gene Loftis, dean of the College of Business, said Haugland's duties would include coordinating the preparation and grading of the comprehensive examinations administered to MBA degree candidates.

Haughland, a member of the Southeast Missouri State faculty since 1966, will also work with the dean in admitting students to the graduate program in business and assigning them advisors.

The MBA degree program was introduced at Southeast Missouri State several years ago and is the newest of the university's graduate offerings. Like many of the institution's graduate programs, much of the MBA enrollment consists of part-time students attending evening courses.

Haughland, a native of Sutherland, Neb., received both his bachelor's and master's degrees at the University of Nebraska in Lincoln, Neb. He took a leave of absence from Southeast Missouri State from 1970 to 1973 to work on his doctorate at Oklahoma State University. He received his doctor of philosophy degree last year.

A member of several business honoraries, Haugland is on the board of directors of the Missouri Association of Accounting Educators, coordinator of memberships in Missouri for the American Accounting Association and a member of the American Finance Association and the Cape Girardeau Association of Professional Accountants. He is also treasurer of the Optimist Club of Cape Girardeau.

200,000 Missourians in vocational education classes

JEFFERSON CITY — More than 200,000 Missourians will participate in vocational education programs during the coming school year, according to projections made by the State Department of Elementary and Secondary Education.

The projections are part of the State Plan for Vocational Education recently presented to and approved by the State Board of Education.

A total of 140 new or expanded programs will be implemented this year, and the 1976-77 enrollment in vocational education is expected to show an increase of 5,000 students above the 1975-76 total.

Several sources of vocational education are available to interested persons in Missouri. Fifty-four area vocational-technical schools are now in operation throughout the state, offering a range of instruction from appliance repair and auto mechanics to food service and licensed practical nursing. Community colleges, junior colleges and state colleges also offer vocational programs in their curricula.

Comprehensive high schools in local districts are important members of the vocational education system in Missouri. The number of applications for vocational programs by secondary schools for this fall is as strong as in past years, according to Dr. Frank Drake, coordinator of vocational education for the State Department of Education. Over the past five years, the number of participants in vocational programs at the secondary level in Missouri has increased by 42,000.

Bombings, striking teachers unsettle schools

By The Associated Press

Classes resumed in orderly fashion in Louisville, Ky., today, in contrast to a bombing and antibusing troubles for the past two days.

Officials reported no trouble in three other cities with new school desegregation plans: Dayton, Ohio; Milwaukee, and Omaha. In St. Louis, also beginning a busing system, officials said they anticipated no problems.

Meanwhile, teachers went on strike in Buffalo, N.Y., and Manchester, N.H. Boston teachers turned down a contract offer but a spokesman said they would hold off a decision on striking until October.

Jefferson County, Ky., school officials reported no problems as pupils returned for the first full week in the second year of court-ordered busing in Louisville. School officials have reported no major troubles in schools themselves since classes reopened last Wednesday.

Police and the FBI continued to investigate a bombing that caused minor damage at Male High School in downtown Louisville on Monday but said there had been no arrests. No one was hurt by the blast. The school opened as usual today.

A Milwaukee school spokesman said things seemed to be going smoothly as classes opened today under a court-ordered racial integration program keyed to voluntary transfers during its first year.

"Generally speaking, it has been a very quiet day for us," said the spokesman.

The integration plan for the 110,000-student system involves busing or transfer of some 6,600 students, about 90 per cent of them black. The plan culminates a 12-year battle for integration proponents that ended in U.S. District Court-ordered busing.

Dayton, Ohio, school officials said there were no major troubles with a court-ordered desegregation plan that began last week. A school spokesman said there were some difficulties with scheduling transportation but that busing opponents seemed to be going along with the plan.

In Omaha, only grumbling was reported as students in grades two through nine boarded buses in the second phase of court-ordered desegration.

In Manchester, N.H., teacher workshops were scheduled today and classes were to begin Wednesday for some 18,000 students.

Mizzou home courses start

COLUMBIA — The state coordinator of the University of Missouri's college- at- home program, Dr. Lynn W. Martin, announced Friday that registration for courses starting Sept. 11 will continue to be accepted after that date.

Martin said although courses officially begin Sept. 11, when the first television lesson is broadcast, those interested in enrolling may register after the official start date.

"In the college- at- home program, students work at their own pace, study according to their own schedule and take exams at their convenience. Therefore, since missed television lessons may be viewed at learning centers which are open seven days a week, the program is flexible enough to allow late enrollments."

Courses offered this fall include studies in accounting, psychology, English literature and education. They will be broadcast throughout the state over KETC-Channel 9 in St. Louis, KOMU - Channel 8 in Columbia, KCPT- Channel 19 in Kansas City and various cable system in Missouri.

All courses offer three hours of either graduate or undergraduate credit from the University of Missouri.

Interested persons are encouraged to contact the program as soon as possible, either by writing the central office at 429 Clark Hall, Columbia, Mo. 65201 or calling toll-free 1-800-392-0536 for more information.

Kissinger to Africa

Associated Press Writer

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has been asked by Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere to begin a diplomatic shuttle in Africa, a senior American official on Kissinger's plane revealed today.

The official, who talked to reporters during a flight from Paris to this north German port city, said the attempt to resolve the festering racial problem between blacks and whites in southern Africa probably will start no later than Monday.

The message reached Kissinger this morning in Paris as he was preparing to brief French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing on his three-day meeting in Zurich with South African Prime Minister John Vorster.

The message from Tanzania was on behalf of Nyerere only and did not speak for the four other black leaders who have just concluded a summit conference on the African situation in Dar es Salaam. However, the invitation is considered a positive development because Nyerere, although a moderate, has considerable influence with the more radical black leaders.

The senior official was definite in stating he would go to Africa, perhaps making his first stop in Dakar, Senegal.

But later, an aide to the secretary said a definite decision would not be made until after Kissinger hears from William E. Schaufele, assistant secretary of state for African affairs, who has been dispatched to the Tanzanian capital to brief black African leaders on the Zurich meeting and to hear their reactions.

The four visiting leaders to the black summit were expected to be gone from Dar es Salaam before Schaufele's arrival, leaving him to meet with only Nyerere.

Nevertheless, there was little indication that anything short of a collapse of prospects for negotiations would prevent Kissinger from going to Africa.

In discussing the planned shuttle, which will take Kissinger from black Africa to white-run South Africa and back to neighboring black states, the senior official judged the chances for success at 50 per cent at best.

Arriving at Hamburg's Fuhlsbuettel Airport for talks with West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, who met Kissinger at the airport, the American secretary said he welcomed the opportunity to report to them on the discussions with Vorster — just as he had previously briefed British and French leaders.

"We are trying to prevent an expansion of the conflict and to find a negotiated solution" for the problems of Rhodesia and Namibia, Kissinger told reporters.

Senior American officials had earlier estimated the first stage of the shuttle might last two to three weeks.

A huge bronze basin capable of holding 10,000 gallons of water and called the Sea of Bronze, stood at Solomon's Temple. Giant bronze bulls faced the four points of the compass.

Congressional primaries held in four states

By The Associated Press

In Florida, Democratic Rep. Robert L.F. Sikes, challenged by John Benton Jr., 26, was burdened by a reprimand from House colleagues for failing to disclose a possible conflict of interest. Benton had resigned from the U.S. Commerce Department and filed for the race one day before the deadline.

Primaries also were held in North Dakota and Connecticut. Besides selecting a Democratic nominee to the House, North Dakota voters were picking a Republican nominee for governor.

Udall, with opposition from Tucson City Councilman Ruben Romero, was forecast by party leaders as the victor. Laird Gutterson, a Udall critic and retired Air Force flier, was unopposed as the GOP nominee for November's general election.

Besides choosing between Udall and Romero, Arizona voters were selecting nominees to replace retiring Republican U.S. Sen. Paul Fannin.

Reps. Sam Steiger and John Conlan sought the GOP nomination. Carolyn Warner, state education superintendent; Dennis DeConcini; and former state Atty. Gen. Wade Church vied for the Democratic nomination.

In North Dakota, Gov. Arthur A. Link ran without opposition on the Democratic ticket. Richard Elkin, state Public Service Commission president, was favored to win the Republican nomination over Herb Geving. Martin Vaaler was not contested as the American party's candidate.

Lloyd Omdahl and Torfin A. Teigen were seeking the Democratic nomination to the state's one House seat. Republican Rep. Mark Andrews had no primary opposition, and Russell Kleppe, a cousin of Interior Secretary Thomas Kleppe, had no opposition for the American party nomination.

Guards to be sepearated in truce village

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) - The United Nations Command and North Korea today began implementing an agreement to separate their guards in the Panmunjom truce village where two American army officers were killed three weeks ago.

A joint observer team met in Panmunjom and agreed on procedures for marking the military demarcation line that divides the 850-yard-wide joint security area, a U.N. Command spokesman said. U.S. and South Korean forces are to remain south of the line, while the North Koreans are to keep to the north side.

The disengagement agreement was reached Monday after a week of secret talks between the secretaries of the delegations to the Korean Military Armistice Commission.

Both North Korean and U.N. Command personnel circulated freely in Panmunjom under the armistice agreement which ended the Korean War and created the 2½-mile-wide demilitarized zone separating North and South Korea. Panmunjom is in the middle of the DMZ.

By The Associated Press

Voters picked congressional candidates in primary elections today in four states, including Arizona, where Rep. Morris K. Udall, a loser to Jimmy Carter for the Democratic presidential nomination, sought renomination to his House seat.

In Florida, Democratic Rep. Robert L.F. Sikes, challenged by John Benton Jr., 26, was burdened by a reprimand from House colleagues for failing to disclose a possible conflict of interest. Benton had resigned from the U.S. Commerce Department and filed for the race one day before the deadline.

Primaries also were held in North Dakota and Connecticut. Besides selecting a Democratic nominee to the House, North Dakota voters were picking a Republican nominee for governor.

Udall, with opposition from Tucson City Councilman Ruben Romero, was forecast by party leaders as the victor. Laird Gutterson, a Udall critic and retired Air Force flier, was unopposed as the GOP nominee for November's general election.

Besides choosing between Udall and Romero, Arizona voters were selecting nominees to replace retiring Republican U.S. Sen. Paul Fannin.

Reps. Sam Steiger and John Conlan sought the GOP nomination. Carolyn Warner, state education superintendent; Dennis DeConcini; and former state Atty. Gen. Wade Church vied for the Democratic nomination.

In North Dakota, Gov. Arthur A. Link ran without opposition on the Democratic ticket. Richard Elkin, state Public Service Commission president, was favored to win the Republican nomination over Herb Geving. Martin Vaaler was not contested as the American party's candidate.

Lloyd Omdahl and Torfin A. Teigen were seeking the Democratic nomination to the state's one House seat. Republican Rep. Mark Andrews had no primary opposition, and Russell Kleppe, a cousin of Interior Secretary Thomas Kleppe, had no opposition for the American party nomination.

Guards to be sepearated in truce village

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) - The United Nations Command and North Korea today began implementing an agreement to separate their guards in the Panmunjom truce village where two American army officers were killed three weeks ago.

A joint observer team met in Panmunjom and agreed on procedures for marking the military demarcation line that divides the 850-yard-wide joint security area, a U.N. Command spokesman said. U.S. and South Korean forces are to remain south of the line, while the North Koreans are to keep to the north side.

The disengagement agreement was reached Monday after a week of secret talks between the secretaries of the delegations to the Korean Military Armistice Commission.

Both North Korean and U.N. Command personnel circulated freely in Panmunjom under the armistice agreement which ended the Korean War and created the 2½-mile-wide demilitarized zone separating North and South Korea. Panmunjom is in the middle of the DMZ.

Booklet tells how to renovate an older home

PUEBLO, Colo. — There it stands. The old house is surrounded by large trees and well-grown shrubs. The inside is laid out with big rooms and high ceilings like you like them. And the price is really good. But it will need some work.

To help consumers decide whether an older house you are buying or living in is worth fixing up, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has published a new book called "Renovate an Old House?" Copies are 35 cents each and may be ordered from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 45, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Before you make any decisions, inspect the house very carefully. You have to spend some time to recognize clues to problems that aren't obvious at the moment.

Start in the basement. Is the foundation good? Some minor settling is normal and can usually be fixed by releveling floor joists and beams. But if you notice settling and cracking of the foundation walls in a number of places, beware. This could indicate the need for major foundation work, a very expensive proposition.

See if the basement is damp, and, if possible, check it after a heavy rain.

With the point of a knife, check the wood in the beams and joists. If the wood is easy to poke or a section comes out with very little resistance, chances are there is decay. And mud tubes going from the ground to the wood mean termite trouble.

Upstairs, try the doors and windows to see if they open and close easily. Jamming probably indicates uneven settling.

Look at the ceiling and walls for water spots, the signs of a leaking roof, vapor through the walls or gutter and downspout problems.

For the mechanical parts of the house, you will probably want an electrician, plumber and heating specialist. Needing new plumbing, wiring and heating is not uncommon for an old house. But the cost must be added to the total.

When you know what work must be done, get estimates. Add this cost, plus a little for slippage, to the price of the house. If the total is about the same or below the price of similar houses in the area, you have a good buy.

"Renovate an Old House?" (35 cents) is one of more than 250 selected federal publications of consumer interest listed in the fall 1976 edition of the catalog, Consumer Information. Published quarterly by the Consumer Information Center of the General Services Administration, Consumer Information is available free from the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Delta College President Donald J. Carlyon on a recent trip to a vegetable and fruit market in Bay City, Mich., discovered this eggplant with a nose reminiscent to several comedians. The eggplant is now the subject of a contest to name it.

Auto Club takes Meramec poll

MARYLAND HEIGHTS — A large majority of the members of the Automobile Club of Missouri who responded to a poll in the Club's magazine, The Midwest Motorist, are in favor of leaving the Meramec River as a free-flowing stream.

Of the first 1,500 ballots received from every section of the state, 1,301 (87 per cent) favored leaving the Meramec as it is, while 199 (13 per cent) favored construction of the dam and lake.

In St. Louis and St. Louis County, sentiment against the dam was 85 per cent in the city and ranged from 87 per cent against in north St. Louis County to 80 per cent in south county areas.

The smallest anti-dam percentage recorded was within a 20-mile radius of the proposed dam near Sullivan, where two-thirds of the members (65.5 per cent) in that area prefer leaving the Meramec as it is.

Interest in the issue diminished with distance from the proposed dam and lake, but those who did respond were even more strongly opposed to its construction. For example, all of the 25 votes so far received from the counties of the northern one-fourth of the state were opposed. Also 100 per cent (out of 64 votes) opposed were members in the Ozark counties around and to the south of Springfield.

Sentiment in the central counties (102 votes) and in the southeastern counties (47 votes) was 94 per cent opposed to construction of the dam.

The club's membership is somewhat older and of higher economic status than the population as a whole.

Neither proponents nor opponents of the dam have access to Auto Club membership lists, and only original ballots taken directly from The Midwest Motorist are being counted. Attached are the tabulations of the first 1,500 ballots and a map showing percentages by zip codes.

With ballots still coming in, complete final tabulations will be printed in the August issue of The Midwest Motorist, which will be mailed to members about Aug. 15.

Carter and Ford open battle for last months

Associated Press Writer

With the presidential election two months from today, Democratic presidential nominee Jimmy Carter is out stumping through the East for votes while President Ford, emphasizing his incumbency, is keeping a high profile in the White House.

Carter opened his battle Monday with a sharp attack on Ford, labeling him a latter-day Herbert Hoover and blaming the Republican party for a myriad of economic woes that Carter claims the Democrats will cure.

Ford stayed in the White House, by-passing the traditional Labor Day campaign start to take care of business, chide Congress for not completing work on a major tax-revision bill, give a television interview and prepare for his own campaign start next week.

While Carter continues a five-day whirlwind opening tour that carries him today from New York to Connecticut to Philadelphia, Ford plans more distinctly presidential activities today, including ceremonies at which he will sign bills providing aid for child day-care centers and for victims of the recent Teton Dam disaster in Idaho.

Ford let surrogates, including Sen. Bob Dole, the GOP vice presidential nominee, carry his banner and answer the criticisms Carter levied Monday on the front steps of Franklin D. Roosevelt's "Little White House" in Warm Springs, Ga.

Carter's running mate, Sen. Walter F. Mondale, spoke Monday at labor rallies in Ohio and California. He charged in a Barberton, Ohio, address that Ford's economic policies have "betrayed" U.S. workers.

Carter, speaking from a podium bearing Roosevelt's portrait, said, "This year, as in 1932, our nation is divided, our people are out of work and our national leaders do not lead."

He recalled that in 1932, with the nation struggling in the grip of the Depression, Roosevelt defeated the incumbent Hoover. Carter described Hoover as "a decent and well-intentioned man who sincerely believed that our government could not or should not with bold action attack the terrible economic and social ills of our nation. He was leading a Republican party which lacked the strength and vision to bring us out of those dark days."

But Carter also promised to fight inflation and balance the U.S. budget.

Carter assailed the Nixon and Ford administrations for budget deficits, inflation and unemployment. Later, in a Norfolk, Va., appearance he charged that "we have a quiet, dormant, timid leadership in Washington, closely tied to special interests."

In Washington, a spokesman for Ford's election committee, William I. Greener, later challenged Carter's statements about the economy and his capsule history of the Roosevelt era. Greener said:

"There isn't a serious economist in America today who would credit the elimination of unemployment during the Roosevelt administration to anything but the global holocaust of World War II.

"President Ford is bringing this nation economic stability, drastically reduced inflation and a lowered unemployment rate through peaceful means."

Ford said in an interview with ABC News on Monday that a victory at the polls on Nov. 2 would strengthen his hand in dealing with the nation's problems.

"Being elected, getting a mandate ... would give me greater impact with Congress, more ability to move ahead," said Ford, who became president in August 1974 when the Watergate scandals forced Richard M. Nixon to resign.

Dole and Carter shook hands when they crossed paths at a stock car race in Darlington, but Carter spokesman Jody Powell said his candidate almost canceled his appearance when he learned Dole was going to be there.

Powell said Carter kept his commitment to attend the race only after finding out that Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., had pressured the race organizers to invite Dole.

Powell accused Dole of exhibiting "bad manners and bad taste" for showing up at the race. Carter later declined to adopt Powell's language, but he noted that his own invitation to the race was long-standing.

Dole made appearances two weeks ago on Carter's heels in Seattle and Des Moines, Iowa.

Dole said at a rally in Florence, S.C., that "we take the South seriously. We want the Southern vote."

He also again denied a report that a former Gulf Oil Corp. lobbyist gave a former Dole aide an illegal campaign contribution in 1973.

Dole released a financial statement showing that he and his wife paid $28,000 in federal income taxes last year on combined income of nearly $108,000. Their net worth was listed as more than $760,000.

Mondale ripped into the Ford administration and the GOP, declaring that "when recession loomed in 1974, they proposed a tax increase when a cut was needed. We want leadership that cares about the human cost of economic mismanagement. We want leadership which will plan for steady growth toward full employment."

Missouri State News in brief

By Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — The prison search saga continues.

Commissioner of Administration J. Neil Nielsen and the state's division of corrections thought they finally had a spot when they recently announced a new site in Grandview, just north of Richards-Gebaur Air Force base near Kansas City.

But early last week Gov. Christopher S. Bond halted all work on that site because of vocal strong opposition from Grandview citizens.

Bond also announced a formation of a group of local and state elected officials to help find an acceptable site in the Kansas City metropolitan area and appointed a Kansas City councilman to head that group.

This is the second major change within the past year.

The Bond administration had originally chosen a site near St. Joseph after opposition to a prison in St. Louis and central Missouri counties forced them to western Missouri.

But that site proved to have too serious legal problems to be accepted and earlier this year it was abandoned.

Legislators appropriated money for the first prison more than a year ago, but that money has not been used because no site had been selected long enough to allow any construction to start.

The first person tried on charges of violating the state's lobbying regulation law was released last week when charges against her were dismissed by Cole County Magistrate Judge Randall Waltz.

Virginia Burmeister, president of the Missouri State Teachers Association, was the first of six lobbyists scheduled to be tried for such offenses. One, a student lobbyist representing a students' organization, pled guilty in July and was fined $100.

Burmeister alleged she had filed as a lobbyist but had done no lobbying. Assistant Cole County Prosecuting Attorney Vernon Dawdy, whose job is to enforce the law, said that whether Burmeister did any lobbying or not once she filed as a lobbyist, the public had a right to know of her activities.

But Waltz said since Burmeister did not lobby, her registration did not matter. "Any law criminal in nature must be strictly construed in favor of the defendant," he said, "and the law seems to indicate that registering as a lobbyist does not necessarily make one a lobbyist."

Dawdy argued that the lobbyist law should be compared to the state's sales tax law, which requires a merchant to report even if no goods are sold. The lobbyist law even contains a provision which allows someone who registered to file a report indicating he or she did no lobbying.

None of the other five lobbyists charged with violating the law have filed motions to dismiss their cases, Dawdy said last week.

There apparently will be no special session of the General Assembly this fall to ponder a new capital punishment law.

A request for such a special session was made recently by state Rep. Harold Volkmer of Hannibal, a Democrat now running for the 9th District Congressional seat.

Volkmer's request followed the actions of two circuit courts who have declared the state's current death penalty unconstitutional following the U. S. Supreme Court decision this past spring.

Gov. Bond, who is the only one who can call such a session, said he does not intend to do it, preferring instead to see what the state's courts of appeal and Supreme Court do first.

The two main legislative leaders, Senate President Pro Tem William J. Cason and House Speaker Richard Rabbitt, are not pushing Volkmer's idea strongly.

Rabbitt said he was in favor of the special session, but that such a decision is only up to Bond. Cason was even more leery of Volkmer's request and like Bond said he wanted to wait and see what the higher courts do with it.

It took Missouri three years after the original U. S. Supreme Court ruling in 1972 to reinstate the death penalty. But the federal high court this past spring issued another ruling which upheld some states' death penalty laws but appeared to strike down Missouri's.

The State Tax Structure Study Commission, meeting in St. Louis about a week ago, heard St. Louis County Supervisor Gene McNary propose that local government dependency on property taxes be eased.

McNary instead proposed that taxes sensitive to the fluctuations of the economy be substituted for the property tax. "Those property taxes that are levied should be based on accurate market values and should be used to defray costs of property-related services such as police, fire, sewers and others," he said.

McNary said he believes that no local government dependent on a property tax "will survive in the long run unless we recognize that local revenues must be tied to inflationary turns in the economy."

A U.S. show of no force

FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON, Ind. — (NEA) — The response to the North Korean murders of two GIs in Panmunjom has been to return fire with rhetoric. We are "shocked." We demand "reparations." And we back this up with a costly show of force in the form of gunboats, fighter planes and fist-banging.

Whom are we fooling? Not the North Koreans. They remember the Pueblo, even if we do not. The distasteful fact, as Secretary of State Kissinger forever reminds, is that "the relationship between military strength and politically unusable power is the most complex in history" — which means we can bark but seldom bite.

The ships we have sent to frighten Pyongyang will not land troops. The planes will not drop bombs. Not for two dead GI's, not for the 83 men of the Pueblo, not possibly for anything short of an attack on American shores. If the President did give the order to draw blood in revenge, much of the post-Vietnam American public would rebel, and under the new laws of Congress the legislature would no doubt stop the retaliation after a consideration period of 30 days.

Then too, perhaps the committed troops themselves would bar an aggressive response. They also are post-Vietnam people, and one supposes they would think twice before risking their lives in a conflict short of national defense. Actually, even the willingness of the soldiers to defend the nation is in doubt. A recent survey of 1,000 Air Force recruits in Texas revealed that 23 per cent would not fight if their base were under attack, and another 28 per cent said they were not sure what they would do. Sleep well tonight, America.

The Air Force survey should not be all that surprising. Esprit de corps and chauvinism have gone the way of brown shoes in the military. In recent years the basic pay for recruits has quadrupled, the work day has been cut, and living conditions have undergone remarkable reforms — yet morale is not high.

The desertion rate per capita is now as bad as it was during the peak war years of Vietnam (some 150 soldiers run away from service every day). And candid officers say American troop discipline can no longer be assumed from day to day.

And so this is the platform to which our show of force in Korea is anchored. And the Communists with their axes know that our social and political ability to do what we say we can do is secured with a gossamer chain. If they hacked 10 troopers to death, or 100, we probably are not as a society prepared to retaliate even if justified.

Nor could we risk the wrath of Pyongyang's allies, notably the Soviets, who are all eight feet tall. This is not the 1950s and the Russians are no longer second best. That nation has twice the active fighting force as America, perhaps 25 times the number of reserve troops, and one suspects that in a showdown its warriors would not be asked by the pollsters about their emotional attitudes.

That showdown increasingly worries America. Jerry Ford assures voters the United States can take care of itself, but the facts suggest something else. R.J. Rummel, a University of Hawaii political scientist, has recently used a computer to determine America's relative strength, and finds it wanting. Rummel says that of 49 indicators of the U.S.-U.S.S.R balance of power, the latter nation leads in 41.

Rummel's pessimism is not unusual. He essentially repeats what former Defense Secretary James Schlesinger has tried to warn: that the Russians outspend the United States on military readiness (this year, about $147 billion to $110 billion); that they have three times the nuclear throw weight and twice the deliverable megatonnage; that they have more planes, more ships and a civil defense program that can work.

Few will listen to Rummel, of course. Few listened to Schleshinger, and now we have Donald Rumsfeld charting our defense future. The North Koreans must be pleased. The Soviets likewise. Meanwhile, anytime anyone chops up our people, or confiscates our property, or cuts off the oil, our response will be to get tremendously angry but do absolutely nothing.

What else can we do?

Children feel Ireland safer than Kennett

KENNETT — Aisling and Etienne O'Connell, Irish to the core, say they enjoyed their summer in Kennett but are happy to be homeward bound, despite the religious tension in their native Ireland and neighboring Northern Ireland.

Aisling, 10, and Mrs. Brian O'Connell of Dublin spent two months here with their grandmother, Mrs. Ruth Sexton. Their mother is the former Suzanne Sexton of Kennett.

What do the youngsters find so terrible about Kennett? "The mosquitoes, the poisonous bugs and the snakes," they replied.

Ireland, they pointed out, has none of those dangers — not the buzzing and biting kind.

Mrs. O'Connell, who accompanied her children for the Kennett visit, said the religious strife betwween Roman Catholics and Protestants in Northern Ireland has affected the youngsters although they live in "free" Ireland rather than the British- occupied counties to the north.

Missouri State News in brief

By Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — The prison search saga continues.

Commissioner of Administration J. Neil Nielsen and the state's division of corrections thought they finally had a spot when they recently announced a new site in Grandview, just north of Richards-Gebaur Air Force base near Kansas City.

But early last week Gov. Christopher S. Bond halted all work on that site because of vocal strong opposition from Grandview citizens.

Bond also announced a formation of a group of local and state elected officials to help find an acceptable site in the Kansas City metropolitan area and appointed a Kansas City councilman to head that group.

This is the second major change within the past year.

The Bond administration had originally chosen a site near St. Joseph after opposition to a prison in St. Louis and central Missouri counties forced them to western Missouri.

But that site proved to have too serious legal problems to be accepted and earlier this year it was abandoned.

Legislators appropriated money for the first prison more than a year ago, but that money has not been used because no site had been selected long enough to allow any construction to start.

The first person tried on charges of violating the state's lobbying regulation law was released last week when charges against her were dismissed by Cole County Magistrate Judge Randall Waltz.

Virginia Burmeister, president of the Missouri State Teachers Association, was the first of six lobbyists scheduled to be tried for such offenses. One, a student lobbyist representing a students' organization, pled guilty in July and was fined $100.

Burmeister alleged she had filed as a lobbyist but had done no lobbying. Assistant Cole County Prosecuting Attorney Vernon Dawdy, whose job is to enforce the law, said that whether Burmeister did any lobbying or not once she filed as a lobbyist, the public had a right to know of her activities.

But Waltz said since Burmeister did not lobby, her registration did not matter. "Any law criminal in nature must be strictly construed in favor of the defendant," he said, "and the law seems to indicate that registering as a lobbyist does not necessarily make one a lobbyist."

Dawdy argued that the lobbyist law should be compared to the state's sales tax law, which requires a merchant to report even if no goods are sold. The lobbyist law even contains a provision which allows someone who registered to file a report indicating he or she did no lobbying.

None of the other five lobbyists charged with violating the law have filed motions to dismiss their cases, Dawdy said last week.

There apparently will be no special session of the General Assembly this fall to ponder a new capital punishment law.

A request for such a special session was made recently by state Rep. Harold Volkmer of Hannibal, a Democrat now running for the 9th District Congressional seat.

Volkmer's request followed the actions of two circuit courts who have declared the state's current death penalty unconstitutional following the U. S. Supreme Court decision this past spring.

Gov. Bond, who is the only one who can call such a session, said he does not intend to do it, preferring instead to see what the state's courts of appeal and Supreme Court do first.

The two main legislative leaders, Senate President Pro Tem William J. Cason and House Speaker Richard Rabbitt, are not pushing Volkmer's idea strongly.

Rabbitt said he was in favor of the special session, but that such a decision is only up to Bond. Cason was even more leery of Volkmer's request and like Bond said he wanted to wait and see what the higher courts do with it.

Flu took toll in 1918

JEFFERSON CITY — "My friend died ... she was only 24. Schools had to be closed."

These are the recollections of one Missouri resident who lived through the peidemic of influenza which swept the nation and the world in 1918-19. Interest currently is being renewed in this epidemic which involved a virus referred to as Spanish flu because of the threat of an outbreak this winter of swin flu.

Dr. Denny Donnell, state epidemiologist, stresses that "we are not saying we are going to have a rerun of that epidemic of the post World War I years. There is no way we could or should make such a prediction.

"We are saying that there are several facts that point to a possible epidemic of swine flu this winter."

Donnell said the new swine flu virus is similar to the 1918 virus. It belongs to a different family than the flu firuses that caused the outbreaks of Hong Kong and Asian Flu in more recent years.

The 1918 influenza pandemic was unique, Donnell noted, because of the high rate of mortality and because so many of the deaths occurred among apparently healthy young men and women.

More than 17,000 deaths from flu and pneumonia occurred in Missouri in 1918. The highest number of the deaths occurred in the age group of 20 to 29 years old.

The number of deaths in the Bootheel area included 121 in Mississippi County, 185 in Pemiscot County, 412 in Dunklin County, 153 in Stoddard County and 142 in Scott County.

Mrs. Jerena East, now retired and living in Jefferson City, recalled she was teaching in Licking in 1919, during the second year of the Spanish flu epidemic. One of her friends, a young woman also in her 20's, entertained some of the teachers at [illegible]. The next day, schools had to be closed because so many children were sick. Two weeks later, when the teachers returned to Licking and their classrooms, their friend was dead.

Schools were closed frequently during the 1918-19 epidemics. Also, public meetings, such as conventions, were canceled and amusement places where the public gathered were shut down for the duration. One cautionary note in a public health report of 1918 suggested that "street cars should be run with open windows, frequently disinfected and floors scrubbed."

"If we had had a flu vaccine in 1920, we would have needed every shot we could get," Donnell said. He noted that the present nationwide immunization program is unprecedented, since it is the first time a vaccine has been available prior to any major influenza outbreak.

Donnell said the public should consider the current immunization program in the same light as other threats to their health and safety.

A tornado warning for your area doesn't mean the storm is going to hit your house. But most people want to take all possible precautions.

"We believe they should react with equal advance preparations to the possibility of a swine flu epidemic," Donnell said.

"They have a lot to gain from taking the swine flu shots and very little to lose," Donnell noted. Tests have demonstrated that the swine influenza vaccine produces an acceptable level of immunity in 85-90 per cent of those who receive it.

"Since the vaccine contains a virus that has been killed or inactivated, no one will get swine flu from taking the shots," Donnell said.

Seoul rebuilt from war rubble

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — By day the streets of this city rebuilt from the rubble of war are clogged with cars assembled in South Korea. High-rise buildings poke through the smog. Shops and restaurants bustle with people.

By midnight, however, a stillness falls over the city and the same wide streets are criss-crossed with roadblocks manned by soldiers who enforce a strict curfew.

The soldiers, armed and in battle trim, are a reminder of what the government says is the darker side of the South Korea reality — the threat from the Communist North, and it has used this fear as grounds to deprive citizens of basic civil rights, according to South Korean and Western sources.

The nation presents a picture of economic vitality combined with political repression. The past 15 years have brought remarkable industrial expansion together with harsh measures that have all but silenced critics of President Park Chung-hee.

Criticism of the political system is a criminal offense and for those accused of it, habeas corpus — a writ preventing indefinite detention without trial — and other legal rights don't exist.

"President Park hears from his advisers that if he doesn't clamp down, there would be students rioting in the streets," a Western diplomat said. "He exhibits a degree of insecurity which is unwarranted."

Critics and supporters of Park both agree, however, that South Korea has experienced unparalleled industrial growth during his regime, and the average Korean's lot has never been better than under the stern army general-turned-politician.

In terms of real growth, the South Korean economy expanded at an annual average rate of 10 per cent over the past 15 years.

Since Park came to power in a military coup in 1961, South Korea has developed from an economy based predominantly on agriculture and fishing, which utilized 80 per cent of the labor force, to an increasingly industrialized one with more than half of the country's workers engaged in manufacturing and service industries.

With increasing wages and a dropping birthrate, the average Korean has benefited, said a Western diplomat

Catalytic convertors aid in sulfuric acid emission

ST. LOUIS — Professor Edward W. Macias of Washington University reported at the 172nd meeting of the American Chemical Society Aug. 31 on the results of pollution- related research which he and three colleagues did on automobiles equipped with catalytic converters. Speaking in San Francisco, he explained that for the purposes of their experiments, these cars were driven on a simulated roadway under conditions matching those of a rush-hour expressway.

They found, he said, "that under such conditions these cars with catalytic converters emitted some 13 per cent of the sulfur in the gasoline they burned as particulate sulfur, thought to be in the form of sulfuric acid."

Macias and reseachers from university, government and industrial laboratories have shown that in eliminating or reducing emission of many other pollutants, the cars with catalytic converters produced noxious sulfuric acid as a byproduct.

Macias noted that the conversion of fuel surfur to surfuric acid is less than originally predicted by some experts, but he warned that "it could still constitute a health hazard for commuters traveling in such automobiles during rush hours."

He added, however, that people 30 meters or more away from the crowded freeways need not be apprehensive because at this distance the roadway-generated particulate surfur concentration is much reduced, thus minimizing a possible health threat.

The Washington University team headed by Macias, associate professor of chemistry, included technical associate Robert A. Fletcher, also from the chemistry department, and Janja and Rudolph Husar, research associate and associate professor, respectively, from the Department of Mechanical Engineering, School of Engineering.

Their experiments to determine the amount of sulfurnic acid generated by catalyst convert- equipped automobiles were carried out at the General Motors Proving Ground in Milford, Mich., in October 1975.

Legislators trying to finish work so they can campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — With election day drawing closer, the 94th Congress is trying to complete work on remaining legislation and get home early for a full month of campaigning.

The priority items remaining on the agenda include extension of the federal revenue-sharing program, revisions of the tax laws, and approval of a defense spending bill.

Returning today from a Labor Day recess, the Senate was scheduled to resume debate on an antitrust bill. A final vote on the measure is set for Wednesday.

The House isn't due back until Wednesday, when it will take up revisions to the Clean Air Act.

A Senate-House conference committee is expected to complete action this week on tax law revisions. The committee's report should reach the House and Senate for action next week.

The congressional leadership is aiming for adjournment by Oct. 2, a date that would give members of Congress a full month to campaign before the Nov. 2 election.

The overwhelmingly Democratic Congress and its record for the past two years has become a major issue in President Ford's campaign.

The Republican President has criticized Congress for spending too much on domestic programs and not enough for defense. He has vetoed more than 50 bills during two years in the White House.

The defense appropriation bill coming up on the floor includes a provision designed to leave a final decision on the B1 bomber to whoever is in the White House next year.

Ford supports going ahead immediately on the new bomber. But the defense money bill restricts the amount that can be spent each month between now and Feb. 1.

The Senate leadership had to overcome a brief filibuster before an agreement could be reached setting a time for a final vote on the antitrust bill. The measure is designed to strengthen enforcement of antitrust laws and would permit state attorneys general to sue for triple damages in federal courts on behalf of consumers. After it completes action on the antitrust bill, the Senate is scheduled to take up a bill that would extend the federal revenue-sharing program until Oct. 1, 1982.

Under the bill approved by the Senate Finance Committee, $6.9 billion would be distributed to localities during 1977.

Muscular dystrophy to receive more funds in area

ST. LOUIS — The Muscular Dystrophy Association (MDA) is investing approximately 25 per cent more in St. Louis- based research and medical service programs this year than it received here through fund-raising efforts in the past fiscal year.

The difference, which is covered from MDA's national fund - raising efforts, was revealed in a 1976-77 progress report released today by the association's Mississippi Valley Chapter.

The report shows that MDA raised $461,340.03 in the St. Louis District area in the 1975-76 fiscal year. For the 1976-77 year, however, the national association is spending $568,780 in this area, an increase of $107,440.

In commenting on the figures in the report, MDA district director Kent D. Hornberger said:

'MDA is concerned to invest its money where it feels it will do the most good. The current allocations, are, to us, an expression of confidence in the quality and level of the research being done by our doctors and research scientists here in St. Louis. And the allocations also are a response to our active and constructive patient and community service program in the St. Louis District."

The biggest allocation is $320,000 for the Jerry Lewis Neuromuscular Disease Research Center at Washington University Medical Center. Established in April, 1975, the center is one of 10 research centers in major medical institutions set and funded by MDA to conduct basic and clinical reseach into vaious aspects of neuro-muscular disease.

The research center here is doing basic research on muscle properties and clinical research on patient care. The center's directors are Drs. Michael H. Brooke and Darryl DeVivo.

Another $151,116 is being spent to support six individual scientific research projects here, plus two clinical fellowships.

MDA has also allocated $97,664 this year to finance its patient and community services here, the report shows. These include three diagnostic clinics providing free medical management and genetic evaluations; such free supporting services as physical therapy, orthepedic aids and summer camp and recreation programs; and professional and public education programs on the 35 muscular dystrophies and related neuromuscular disorders served by MDA.

Hornberger had special praise for the St. Louis organizations which have sponsored and supported MDA's fund - raising efforts here. "The total raised here," he pointed out, "does not show the enormous value of the time, talent and money expended by our sponsors on MDA's behalf."

Hornberger called attention to the audit of MDA's national finances completed earlier this year by S. D. Leidesdorf & Co., Certified Public Accountants. Leidesdorf reported that 19 per cent of total funds spent by MDA reflect administrative and fund-raising costs.

"That means," Hornbeger emphasized, "that 81 per cent of contributed funds -- or 8.1 cents out of every dime -- goes directly to aid individuals and to support research and program services."

He added: "The unrecorded donations of our corporate, media and labor supporters, plus groups like the Roller Skating Rink Operators and the Northwest Plaza Merchants Association, have helped us stretch our research and service dollars to an unusual extent. The allocations we received this year recognize that the MDA family in St. Louis has many very loyal, dedicated and generous members. They have been absolutely essential to the success of our programs in the St. Louis District."

The district serves patients in eastern Missouri, from the Iowa to the Arkansas borders, and in Madison, St. Clair and Monroe counties in Illinois.

MDA's three clinics are at Firmin Desloge Hospital, the new St. Louis University Health Center and Washington University Medical Center.

MDA's biggest fund- raising event of the year, both nationally and in the St. Louis area, is the Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon, which was seen here on KSD-TV, Channel 5, from 10:30 p.m. Sunday to 5:30 p.m. Monday.

Catalytic convertors aid in sulfuric acid emission

ST. LOUIS — Professor Edward W. Macias of Washington University reported at the 172nd meeting of the American Chemical Society Aug. 31 on the results of pollution- related research which he and three colleagues did on automobiles equipped with catalytic converters. Speaking in San Francisco, he explained that for the purposes of their experiments, these cars were driven on a simulated roadway under conditions matching those of a rush-hour expressway.

They found, he said, "that under such conditions these cars with catalytic converters emitted some 13 per cent of the sulfur in the gasoline they burned as particulate sulfur, thought to be in the form of sulfuric acid."

Macias and reseachers from university, government and industrial laboratories have shown that in eliminating or reducing emission of many other pollutants, the cars with catalytic converters produced noxious sulfuric acid as a byproduct.

Macias noted that the conversion of fuel surfur to surfuric acid is less than originally predicted by some experts, but he warned that "it could still constitute a health hazard for commuters traveling in such automobiles during rush hours."

He added, however, that people 30 meters or more away from the crowded freeways need not be apprehensive because at this distance the roadway-generated particulate surfur concentration is much reduced, thus minimizing a possible health threat.

The Washington University team headed by Macias, associate professor of chemistry, included technical associate Robert A. Fletcher, also from the chemistry department, and Janja and Rudolph Husar, research associate and associate professor, respectively, from the Department of Mechanical Engineering, School of Engineering.

Their experiments to determine the amount of sulfurnic acid generated by catalyst convert- equipped automobiles were carried out at the General Motors Proving Ground in Milford, Mich., in October 1975.

Legislators trying to finish work so they can campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — With election day drawing closer, the 94th Congress is trying to complete work on remaining legislation and get home early for a full month of campaigning.

The priority items remaining on the agenda include extension of the federal revenue-sharing program, revisions of the tax laws, and approval of a defense spending bill.

Returning today from a Labor Day recess, the Senate was scheduled to resume debate on an antitrust bill. A final vote on the measure is set for Wednesday.

The House isn't due back until Wednesday, when it will take up revisions to the Clean Air Act.

A Senate-House conference committee is expected to complete action this week on tax law revisions. The committee's report should reach the House and Senate for action next week.
